Chappell Trial Jury Recesses for Night After Short Session

Body Retires for Evening at 10:30;
Peek Couple Murder Case
Took Eight Days.

By WILLARD COPE,
Staff Writer.

MARIETTA, Ga., Aug. 6.—Twelve grim-faced men, who had listened for eight days without a revealing expression, went into session early tonight to decide the fate of broad-shouldered, handsome and inscrutable 22-year-old Bill Chappell of Carrollton on a murder charge.

The jury had heard seven hours of oratory by state and defense, and Superior Court Judge J. Harold Hawkins' charge defining murder, before filing into their quarters in the red brick courthouse to begin deliberations at 6:05 o'clock.

Recess at 10:30 P. M.

They remained in their small, hot chamber for more than three hours, taking an hour out for dinner, and finally recessing for the night a few minutes before 10:30 o'clock.

While they were out, the courtroom, crowded for more than a week, remained more than half full. Chappell, surrounded by his entire family, sat calm and unmoved at the defense table.

Small Group Waits.
In the section reserved for spectators a small group waited patiently for the jury's decision. A continuous drone of gossip and small talk, reminiscent of a church social, went on continuously as friends went over to meet friends and exchange greetings.

The prosecution and judge alone, of the important characters, were missing from the scene, but they too were close by, ready to be called had the jury come to a decision.

The jury is expected to resume its deliberations early tomorrow morning.

Jury Is Enigma.

All more than middle-aged, all sunburned, in unassuming clothing, without having once smiled since they were chosen on Monday of last week, the jury frankly was an enigma to lawyers, court attaches and spectators alike.

Already the case—based on the finding of the bodies of J. Ed Peek and his wife on June 20, 1938, in Mahaffey's railroad cut, three miles northeast of Austell—had set a county record for duration.

Especially trying upon all participants had been the unrelieved heat and crowding of the courtroom.

Chappell had been directly accused by Lewis Turner, a convict, with leading a party of four, including Turner, another convict, Jason Clark and John Holston, back, alms house inmate, which, it is charged, finally murdered the Peeks, saturated them with kerosene and sent them, in their automobile, crashing into the 50-foot railroad cut.

The prosecution insisted Chappell and his politically powerful father, Commissioner Hamp Chappell, had close business relations with Peek, a salesman of

Amortization Plan Approved By House Body

Defense Taxes, Expanded
Munitions Plants
Are Provided.

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—

The house tax subcommittee agreed tonight on an excess profits levy which would impose taxes of 25 to 40 per cent on a certain proportion of industry's profits arising from the huge defense program and yield the treasury $300,000,000 to $500,000,000 a year.

The measure also would permit concerns which expand their plants for the purpose of handling government arms contracts to charge off the cost of their expansion against their earnings within five years, at the rate of 20 per cent a year, or sooner if the emergency should end.

This was a point on which many industrialists had sought reassurance before accepting government contracts. In order to expedite passage of the measure, members of the senate finance committee will sit in at the sessions starting Friday, when the full house ways and means committee considers the bill.

Two Alternatives.

The plan provides two alternatives by which companies may compute the "excess profits" which would be subject to tax. Setting 1936-39 as a "base period," one plan is based on current earnings as compared with the average earnings over the base period; the other takes account of earnings and invested capital.

Under either alternative, the first $5,000 of a concern's "excess profit" would be exempt from any tax. Chairman Cooper, Democrat, Tennessee, of the subcommittee, said that this was "designed to take care of the small companies" and estimated that it would exempt all but 70,000 of the 475,000 odd corporations in the country from paying the tax.

For "excess profits" beyond $5,000, the tax rates would be 25, 30 and 40 per cent. The 25 per cent tax would apply to so much of a firm's excess profits as equalled 10 per cent of its "tax credit." The 30 per cent tax would apply to the second 10 per cent, and the 40 per cent tax to the remainder of the excess profits.

Tax Credits.

The "tax credits" could be figured in two ways. Under the first plan, a concern simply would deduct from its current earnings as a tax credit an amount equal to its average earnings during the four designated years.

The second system would grant a maximum credit of 10 per cent of invested capital and a minimum of 6 per cent of the first $500,000 of a concern's invested capital plus 4 per cent of the balance.

A concern which had earned 10

House Favors Wire Tapping In Spy Hunt

FBI on 24-Hour Schedule as It Presses Investigations.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—(AP)—

Pressing its investigation of "Fifth Column" suspects, the Federal Bureau of Investigation put all its field offices on a 24-hour schedule today, while the house passed a bill permitting wire tapping by the FBI in investigations of sabotage, treason and espionage.

The Interstate Commission on Crime, meanwhile called for an investigation of what it termed the "Nazi-Fascists' use of attaches of legations and consulates for subversive propaganda and other Fifth Column activities in the United States."

The commission, reporting to the conference of state officials on federal and state co-operation, called attention to "the surprising increase" in the personnel of the consulates and declared "espionage and sabotage are to be expected from Nazi-Fascist consulates and business firms."

The conference of state officials received reports recommending:

1. A broadened foreign agents registration act.
2. Setting up a federal agency to analyze foreign propaganda in co-operation with local groups.
3. Careful restriction of the use of private organizations and individuals other than constituted law authorities in defense activities.

4. Opposition to enactment of state sedition laws.

Mrs. W. D. Lamar To Support Willkie

MACON, Ga., Aug. 6.—(UP)—Mrs. Walter D. Lamar, head of the Women's Division of Independent Democrats of Bibb county, today sent Wendell L. Willkie a telegram, pledging support of the Independent Democrats, a group organized last week.

The telegram said: "Nomination for third term and methods by which it was secured, together with the dictatorial bureaucracy that regiments and a centralization that crushes combine to make it impossible for old line states rights Democrats to accept results of the Chicago convention. We are satisfied you stand for liberal Democratic principles. There have been organized Independent Democrats who hope to carry Georgia for you."

Kresge Official Tried To Force Donations to Willkie--Byrnes

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—(UP)—A charge by Senator James F. Byrnes, Democrat, South Carolina, that a high official of the S. S. Kresge Company had sought to coerce company employees into contributing to Wendell L. Willkie's campaign fund brought demands tonight that congress plug loopholes in the Hatch "clean politics" act.

Byrnes and Attorney General Robert J. Jackson, two of several New Dealers who master-minded President Roosevelt's third-term nomination, both demanded action before the November election.

Byrnes' charge was made to Senator Guy M. Gillette, Democrat, Iowa, chairman of the Senate Campaign Expenditures Investigating Committee, in a letter which incorporated a message to some 600 Kresge employees in Detroit, Mich. The message was signed by "C. B. Tuttle."

Letter Points to Debt.

The message was sent to Byrnes by an unidentified Kresge employee.

Byrnes identified "Tuttle" as vice president and treasurer of the Kresge company. The senator presumed that ultimately Tuttle's message would be sent to all of the company's 40,000 employees in 7,000 stores. As read to the senate to become part of the Congressional Record, the letter began with a hope that the ensuing request would be neither "a touch or a command, but a privilege you may still enjoy as a free American citizen."

It pointed to the mounting national debt, and said that those who have been in steady employment "will want to take action both in a financial and active manner to help in the election this fall of Wendell Willkie."

Stating that the stage is set for "a complete upset of the dictatorial administration of Roosevelt, and unless we remove him, in my opinion we shall need a receiver rather than a President," the letter continued:

"To finance a national campaign of this magnitude requires a very great amount of money, and Mr. Willkie will not be in a position to demand a week's salary from everyone on the government payroll, or dole—so it is up to folks like you and me to foot the bill."

The letter emphasized the need of electing a Republican congress to support a Republican President, and said that the sender has the backing of company officers in "this undertaking." It ex-

Holt's Family Called Slackers In Bitter Debate

Furious Senator in Turn
Blasts Minton as 'Filth Throwing.'

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—(UP)—

Angry words flew today during senate debate over the National Guard mobilization bill when Senator Sherman Minton, Democrat, Indiana, accused Senator Rush Holt, Democrat, West Virginia, of being a member of a "slacker family," and was in turn branded by Holt as a "mud and filth thrower."

This and other clashes blocked leadership plans to dispose of the measure tonight and take up tomorrow the revised version of the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill.

Draft Bill Assailed.

Temper snapped also in the house military affairs committee which has both measures under consideration. It voted 11 to 10 against hearing additional witnesses on the conscription bill after a stormy session during which those calling for additional testimony were branded as "Fifth Columnists" by Representative Charles I. Faddis, Democrat, Pennsylvania.

"You are leading us down the same road as France, Faddis flung at Representative Dewey Short, Republican, Missouri.

Holt had completed a long attack on the draft bill when Minton assailed him.

"I am sick and tired and impatient of being lectured by a member of a slacker family," Minton said. "When I was in France in 1917, the father of the Senator from West Virginia was preaching that you shouldn't raise food to send to me."

"Malicious Lies."
Holt, eyes blazing, jumped to his feet and told Minton that he would answer "your malicious lies" as soon as he completed his remarks. This brought a demonstration from the galleries which a few moments before had loudly applauded Holt's attack on the conscription bill.

Holt glared at the Indiana senator and said that whenever the administration "wants filth and gutter mud thrown they always turn to you."

This brought Senate Majority Leader Barkley, Democrat, Kentucky, to his feet protesting against the use of personalities contrary to senate rules and Holt was so reminded by Senator Russell, Democrat, Georgia, who instructed him to proceed "in order."

Pepper Offers Bill for Sale of 50 Destroyers

Administration Believed
Behind Pershing Move
To Aid Britain.

By The United Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Advocates of short-of-war aid to Great Britain today began a drive to carry out General John J. Pershing's proposal that the United States sell 50 over-age destroyers to England.

Leader of the movement was Senator Claude Pepper, Democrat, Florida, who sought early action in the foreign relations committee on his resolution to authorize such a transfer. Pepper frequently speaks with administration approval, but it was not disclosed whether his measure has such backing.

Some sources believed Pershing made his proposal with President Roosevelt's approval. They pointed out in this connection that Secretary of State Cordell Hull personally congratulated the 79-year-old A. E. F. commander after he voiced his suggestion in a nationwide broadcast Sunday night. They also recalled that Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles said at a press conference that Pershing's words merit respect.

"Trial Balloon" Seen.

There was speculation the speech might have been a "trial balloon." The day Pershing advocated the transfer, Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox asserted in a broadcast from Manchester, N. H., that if Britain falls and the dictators break or seize her sea power, the Atlantic ocean, instead of remaining a defense barrier, will become "an express highway for hostile fleets."

Knox's address was part of a symposium of speeches by War and Navy Department leaders backing selective compulsory military training. Only yesterday Knox conferred with Colonel William J. Donovan, after the latter returned from a secret European mission aboard a British trans-Atlantic plane.

Today Hull added his voice to those of administration leaders in telling of dangers besetting not only the United States, but the entire western hemisphere.

He did not mention conscription specifically, but asserted that Americans must "become thoroughly conscious of the possibilities of danger" and "make up their minds that we must continue to arm and to arm to such an extent that the forces of conquest and ruin will not dare make an attack upon us or on any part of this hemisphere."

While Pepper strove for quick action on his resolution, a second means of carrying out Pershing's suggestion was proposed by Chairman Key Pittman, of the senate foreign relations committee. He suggested that American destroyers be traded for British battle-ships which "seem to be of little use" to the British in North Sea battles.

Rome first reported actual land fighting in Egypt by a vanguard of 500,000 soldiers Mussolini has at his command in Africa. Italian authorities said their men drove the British back when the Italians marched into Egypt to begin the great drive eastward.

The British reported that Italy's move into British Somaliland began August 4 when three columns drove into the British land adjoining Ethiopia.

What Egypt would do was not known, but that cotton-rich land, tied to Britain by military alliances, already has broken diplomatic relations with Mussolini and has notified Italy that any attack would put Egypt into the war actively beside Britain. Egypt was specifically excluded from Mussolini's declaration of war as long as she took no part against Italy, but since then Italian planes have bombed Alexandria, an Egyptian port.

Colony Invaded.

The Italians already have invaded Britain's Kenya colony in Africa but the almost two months since Mussolini entered the war have been taken up mainly with preparing the ground for the huge offensive.

Germany and Britain continued their aerial exchanges.

The British said one German bomber was shot down yesterday and that their Royal Air Force had bombed the German naval base of Kiel, the German city of Hamburg, and other military objectives in Germany and Holland.

The Nazis, even before Britain reported the latest Hamburg raid, said anti-aircraft fire at Hamburg drove off a large number of British raiders before dawn yesterday.

British authorities said that information reaching them indicated Germany's preparations for the expected blitzkrieg on England are not yet complete, although they are well advanced. These sources said they believed an attempt to invade the island kingdom might be made within the next week or two.

Germany claimed she was smashing British shipping at a far higher rate even than in the World War. German officials said 4,986,860 tons of British merchant ves-

U.S. Envoy Asks Britain to Avert Belgian Famine

London, However, Hints Blockading Navy Won't Permit Shipments.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—(P)—Great Britain, it was indicated tonight, probably will refuse an implicit plea by the United States ambassador to Belgium that the blockading British navy permit shipment of food from America to avert starvation in Belgium and elsewhere in Europe.

An informed British source said it was "unlikely that Britain will allow any food into German-occupied Europe."

The envoy, John Cudahy, had declared that conditions "close to famine" would prevail in Belgium by mid-September unless American shipments get through.

"A Howling Hell," indirectly he used the phrase, "a howling hell," to picture the possible situation in Belgium and elsewhere in Europe when winter comes.

Within a few hours after Cudahy's prediction, this British comment discounting it was forthcoming.

"It is not at all certain that Europe will be in such a bad way over food as Mr. Cudahy thinks. Belgium and the other occupied countries will have to make up their shortages from Germany. If the Germans are prepared to share fairly there probably won't be any famine in Europe this winter."

May Await Test Case.—This source added that the official British attitude toward relaxation of the European blockade is not likely to be defined until a test case arises—that is, when a food ship encounters the blockade, which extends from Africa to the Arctic.

Cudahy cited the probability that German troops of occupation would live off the food of conquered lands if their communications were cut, using supplies which in themselves would be insufficient to support the native populations.

At the same time, Cudahy left some of his interviewers with the impression that he would propose that Washington prepare to deal economically and politically with Germany as the dominant power on the continent.

This point was left vague. Cudahy said he would present the food situation when he returns to the United States next week and "further present the reality of dealing with force as the only power." He would not amplify the remark.

England Buys Effects of War Egypt's Entire Cotton Crop Cited by O'Neal

Disposal of 80 Million Expected To Offset Loss of Markets.

ALEXANDRIA, Aug. 6.—(P)—The Arabic newspaper Al Mokattam said today that British purchase of Egypt's entire cotton crop—80,000,000 bales valued at $120,000,000 to $160,000,000—would be announced in parliament tomorrow by Premier Hassan Sabry Pasha.

This was expected to offset the wartime loss of Egypt's markets and the routes of delivery. It has been impractical to use the Mediterranean or Red sea except under strong convoy.

Anxious cotton growers have been urging that the entire crop be sold to Britain as the last hope of disposing of it and avoiding great financial difficulties.

The Egyptian growers lost their German, Polish and Czechoslovakian markets last year, and this year has wiped Italy, France, Belgium and the Netherlands off the list of buyers. There has been little hope, too, of deliveries to Sweden, Switzerland, Hungary and Rumania, other cotton customers in normal times.

Without a market for the 1940 harvest, the growers have said, they would be unable to finance their 1941 planting and cultivation.

Berlin Denies Reports Of Ex-Nazi Aide's Death

BERLIN, Aug. 6.—(P)—British reports of the death of Julius Streicher, former Nazi party district leader from Franconia, were denied today by German authorities who said he was quite well on his farm near Nurnberg.

The report was published by Reuters (British news agency) in a dispatch dated "the German Frontier," and was attributed to "a well-informed source in Germany." The reason for Streicher's suspension from his Franconia post were not made known.

Storm Lashes States Along The Gulf Coast

One Death From Fright Is Only Casualty Reported.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 6.—(P)—Storm refugees by the hundreds fled Louisiana's low-lying Gulf coast today before a tropical disturbance edging westward toward Texas after causing extensive floods and disrupting communications from Mobile, Ala., to western Louisiana.

The death of one man from fright was the only casualty reported, but it was feared there might be additional loss of life in isolated coastal settlements swept by high tides that accompanied the gale and tropical downpour.

The weather bureau this afternoon put the center of the storm on or near the Louisiana coast just southeast of Morgan City, La., apparently moving west northwestward. Storm warnings were extended to Houston, Texas, with gales expected along the upper Texas coast tonight.

Throughout the day the historic Evangeline country of southwest Louisiana, where the Acadian maid of poetic fame lies buried, was lashed by the gale which caused extensive crop damage in that sugar, rice and truck-growing section.

The storm officially opened the tropical hurricane season in the Gulf. Weather bureau stations meanwhile watched another disturbance moving toward the Bahamas late today.

A moderate tropical storm with highest winds around 30 miles an hour passed over Turks Island in the easternmost Bahamas at noon, the Jacksonville bureau's afternoon advisory said.

Described as of "slight intensity" the disturbance continued to move west-northwest through the Bahamas where caution was advised this afternoon and tonight.

Georgian Starts Fund To Give Lindy to Nazis

AUGUSTA, Ga., Aug. 6.—(P)—Initial contribution to a "fund to send Colonel Lindbergh to Germany" was received today at the office of the Augusta Chronicle.

Vets May Take Over Guards' Duties--F. D. R.

If Troops Are Called They Might Serve in Home Defense.

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Aug. 6.—(P)—President Roosevelt disclosed today that World War veterans might take over home defense duties now assigned to the National Guard if and when the guard is brought into federal service.

In the broader field of hemispheric co-operation the chief executive told a press conference that a meeting of minds on defense against non-American nations was one of three extraordinarily successful achievements of the Pan-American conference at Havana.

He said in response to an inquiry that unity of the Americas is without question more of a fact now than ever before.

The conference was successful also, he said, in taking steps to solve mutual economic problems of the American nations, which loom much larger because of the war in Europe, and in setting up machinery to combat Fifth Column activities originating outside the Americas.

The general aspects of the Havana meeting were up for discussion at a luncheon which the President and Mrs. Roosevelt gave today for four Latin American representatives at the conference.

The question of replacing the National Guard for home defense activities was brought up when Governor Herbert Lehman, of New York, had supper with Mr. Roosevelt last night.

The matter still is in the study stage and the War Department has not yet made recommendations, the President said, then added that probably veterans and such organizations as the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars would form the nucleus of the home guard.

Veterans then face the prospect of being asked to serve in any instances in which a governor proclaimed martial law. They might go on duty in strikes, riots or disasters.

$10,000 (10 per cent of the total credit), $3,000 on the second $10,000 and $10,000 on the remaining $23,000, or a total tax of $15,000.

Committee aides said invested capital would be defined as stock and capital contributing such as paid-in surplus, the earnings left in the business, minus distributions in dividends and the like and deficits.

It was explained that in computing invested capital, borrowed money would be included on a sliding scale. It would be admitted 100 per cent until it raised the total invested capital beyond $100,000; two-thirds between $100,000 and $1,000,000 and one-third above $1,000,000.

The measure would repeal the Vinson-Trammell act's limit on the profits from warships and army and navy aircraft.

Reporter Sees Italians, British Fight in Desert

Guns Blaze Away as 'Guest' Looks on From Observation Post.

By JAMES ALDRIDGE. For the North American Newspaper Alliance.

WITH THE BRITISH FORCES IN THE WESTERN DESERT IN EGYPT, Aug. 6.—(By Wireless)—The observation post was just over the sand ridge. You could not go around the ridge so, to get to the observation post, it was necessary to go over the ridge. You never wanted to go over the ridge because the Italians could see you when you got on top and, if you stood there, you were like a mountain on a plain and they could take a shot at you.

I followed marked rocks between sage brush that led to the ridge. It was fairly safe going up this ridge, however, for you were well hidden from the Italians until you got on top. Finally I reached a concealed and sandbagged rise on top of the ridge. With a crouch rush, I fell into the pit there. "Hello," someone said. I looked up. It was a boy of about 23. He was a captain according to the pips on his shoulder.

Cautioned to Keep Down.—"Keep down," he said. "They can see you when you do that."

I crouched next to him and peered through the hole and looked out on the barren desert. There was nothing in sight except a few sticks of a burned-out Italian plane and lorry.

"I thought I would see something," I said.

"You will," he said. "The air batteries are just over on the ridge about 2,000 yards away. Their observation post is just on the right, 1,000 yards away, and they have an encampment camouflaged near the battery. Wait till our 20-pounders start on them."

Suddenly there was a flash and roar from the ridge and, before we heard the high moaning whistle overhead, we ducked.

"There they go," said the young captain. "Looking for our third battery."

The Italian guns roared and flashed again—one, two, one, two, three—and smoke puffed in the air.

The captain on the field telephone, on whose box I was sitting, yelled to battery headquarters. "That's their battery on the ridge. You can let them have it."

Fire at Ridge. He swung around and fired at the ridge. There was another one, two, three from our 20-pounders and two from the Italians, then another two. I heard them burst behind.

Then, for a second, it was strangely silent. Suddenly a flat, quick burst from somewhere in front of the ridge into an earth-shaking boom on the right near our ridge.

"What's that? What's that?" I asked.

"Their 77s. You are all right," the captain said.

I heard the whistle of the next one, getting lower and lower in tone until it sounded personal and as though directed toward my ears. I did not hear the explosion. All I remember is, sand flashing into my eyes.

"I'm hit! I'm hit!" I shouted. I heard the captain's voice saying, "You are all right, you are all right. It was miles away."

I was on the ground, spitting out sand and rubbing my eyes. "I want to get out of this," I said.

Reassuring Voice. "You are all right. They are nowhere near us. They don't even know we are here and they are rotten shots anyway."

There was a double roar from behind, from forward and from near by. It repeated itself. The captain suddenly shouted above the roar, "We have got one of their 77s. I'm sure of it. We've got one."

Then there was silence. I crouched as I got out of the dugout. The captain leaned over and said, "If you get to the major tell him I think we bagged a 77 in tonight's show."

"Is that all?" I asked.

"That's all," said the captain. "So long," I said and made my way back down the ridge to tell the major.

IL DUCE MAKES HIS MOVE—A half-million legionnaires of Mussolini's Roman Empire were on the move yesterday in Africa, playing for the highest stakes they have sought since ancient Rome ruled the world. Italian authorities said their Libyan troops had advanced into Egypt, striking toward the Suez Canal, while from Ethiopian bases columns thrust into British Somaliland and Kenya (black arrows). A drive from Italian East Africa into Anglo-Egyptian Sudan (white arrow) is anticipated by the British, who realize the importance of Egypt to Il Duce's dream of empire.

Birmingham Officials

Ban Browder Rally

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 6.—(UP)—The Birmingham city commission today refused to permit Earl Browder, Communist presidential candidate, hold a campaign rally in the city courthouse.

It was reported the request was declined because there were numerous Negro Communist party members here and the commission objected to "mixed crowds" in public places. Robert F. Hall, secretary of the Alabama Communist party, said that refusal amounted to "denial of constitutional right of free assembly."

German Language Made Official in Luxembourg

LUXEMBOURG, Aug. 6.—(P)—The Nazi civil administrator of Luxembourg decreed German the official language of the Grand Duchy today and predicted that within a few weeks the "artificially-applied exterior French varnish" will have disappeared, revealing the "German character" of the people.

In some quarters this was interpreted as an indication of the gradual assimilation of the Nazi-occupied Grand Duchy into the Reich. Formerly some French, some German and a Luxembourg dialect was spoken in the little duchy at the corner of France, Belgium and Germany.

Training for Defense

The compulsory military training bill has now been approved by the senate committee and is before the senate for action by that body. As it left the committee the bill provides for the registration of about 12,000,000 men, between the ages of 21 and 30. Of these, groups would be called up at intervals for training in the arts and necessities of the modern soldier.

It is unlikely that more than 200,000 or 300,000 would be called up in the first draft. However, the purpose of the bill is to give to every American man, of the proper age and physical condition, the training in warfare that would make him, in time of emergency, capable of handling himself as a soldier, instead of a raw recruit, and to give this country a man power reserve that could quickly be transformed into an army of any needed size, should the emergency arise.

It should be stressed that the training to be given these draftees is training in warfare for defense exclusively. Nobody in this country has any idea of sending another A. E. F. to Europe. As a matter of fact, more manpower is not needed by Britain, at this time.

But, if war comes to these shores—as it almost certainly will if Britain is conquered—we must have an army, ready and properly trained. That is the purpose of the compulsory military training bill.

It is proposed that the men called up under this bill be given one year's training. A soldier, today, cannot be created in less time.

The young men of America, who would have to fight for their lives, their homes and their country should this nation be attacked, have a right to demand full training in advance. For the untrained man today is merely cannon fodder, doomed to quick death under war conditions as they are.

And the plan of drafting the required number of men, without favoritism to section, class or individual, is the only truly democratic way of creating an army.

Quality, Not Quantity

If the new census reveals that your community has not grown in numbers, don't be discouraged about it. There's not a bit of cause for alarm or that down-in-the-mouth feeling. There are other things much more important than mere size, in the opinion of a learned gentleman who has studied the situation. He is Professor William L. Bailey, of Northwestern University, and his opinions on this subject cannot help but strike a responsive note in the minds of intelligent persons.

What are the tests of a fit community in which to live? Take a look at the professor's list, and see if you don't agree with his qualifications. There are many items on the list. They are annual real earnings, schools, religious education, working hours for men, teachers' qualifications for kindergarten, health auxiliaries, evening schools, advisory technical board and vocational education, library income, child labor, correspondence study, balanced church budget, churches, form of municipal government. There are 11 other points on the list. These include such things as water supply, sewers and city engineer training.

Thus, points out the professor, it must be remembered the population size of a community is almost of no significance in the things that matter in making for sound prosperity and progress. And, to meet the new trends in population, the professor urges people to see things through qualitative, instead of quantitative, glasses. He concludes by pointing out that if they are able to see and make the best of what is going on, there is a better balanced country in prospect.

The bathing beauty contestant now rears her dazed, if lovely, head. Comes the problem of fitting the long sash, reading "Miss Shenandoah Falls," to the perfect 32.

Happily, the Wilkie campaign is not to tee off on a golf course. It will be remembered Landon's did, and was never out of the rough.

In Ohio, a woodpecker has worked for weeks on the head of a statue of a departed dignitary in a park. In the absence of any details, we can only feel the bird knows best.

U. S. Tax Collectors

Nowadays, when you step up to the box office of your favorite picture theater, don't complain if the lovely girl cashier takes a second or so longer to accept your cash and provide your pasteboard admission slips. And don't, either, complain if, in your change, you get a number of pennies.

For the young lady has been given, whether she likes it or not, a new and additional duty to perform. She is not only a ticket seller, she is a collector of taxes for Uncle Sam.

The new tax on amusement tickets, 10 per cent on all costing 20 cents or more, is expected to raise $50,000,000 toward paying for the defense program. Therefore, regardless of a slight additional delay and regardless of any inconvenience about carrying around a pocketful of pennies, it ill behooves any of us to complain. If we did, in the emergency that exists today, we should put ourselves in the classification of the disloyal.

There are, in round figures, 10,000 of these new tax windows for the United States standing in front of the picture theaters of the United States. And, in so far as is known, not a one of them is complaining about the added detail and new difficulties that have resulted.

One great theater chain alone, it is said, keeps on hand, at all times, 25,000,000 pennies to make change. Each tax ticket, each complimentary pass, must be stamped separately by the ticket seller. The theater manager, or his deputy, the cashier, must check the tax receipts, each day, separately from the balance, must keep separate accounts and fill out all sorts of lengthy and complicated forms.

Too, the war in Europe has probably hit the movie business, through all its departments, harder than almost any other. The European market for films has almost completely gone, while the attendance at American theaters has fallen off.

Yet the movie makers and the movie exhibitors are not complaining.

If they don't object, you should not.

Seeing what Whoools does with Europe will give us a line on what the other kingfish, Huey Long, might have made of the United States.

Propagandist's Error

If Nazi Germany expects radio listeners in Germany itself, as well as in the captured states, to believe all the propaganda they hear, the German ministry of information should at least guard against palpable contradictions among its own broadcasters.

Disclosure of the heartless and ruthless manner in which German conquerors have stripped occupied lands even of the necessities of life came unwittingly from the Germans themselves, the other night, in two broadcasts.

The first, from the German-controlled station at Brussels, attempted to explain an acute shortage of butter in Antwerp. It declared only a small part of the butter had been "purchased" for the German army. "The disappearance of this commodity from the open market," the broadcaster continued, "is principally due to the fact that a gang of criminal dealers have purchased butter in the dairies and from the farmers."

The identity of that "gang of criminal dealers," becomes plain when the words of another radio broadcaster, on the same night, are considered. This second broadcast was included in the program for German home listeners. It included a gleeful and triumphant announcement that "a special additional butter ration of 125 grammes per head in Germany," had been arranged.

And it must not be forgotten that the "purchasers" of butter in Holland were made by Germans with German-printed money actually worthless in any normal currency market.

Europe's geography begins to recall old times on the Mississippi, as recounted by Mark Twain's ancient riverman—"When Louisiana was over in Arkansas—"

Editorial of the Day

ISLANDS IN THE AXIS SEA.

(From The New York Times.)

Now that France has been conquered the totalitarian sea has submerged every democracy of continental Europe except for three little islands of freedom: Switzerland, Sweden and Finland. All three have held bravely to their democratic institutions, but all three know that their survival for another year, another month, another week, is almost entirely at the mercy of the totalitarian forces that swirl around them.

A case in point is Switzerland, a country so strong for its size, so well trained and well armed to fight for its liberties, that even the Nazis have thought twice about invading it. But the collapse of France has left the Swiss at Hitler's mercy, without a single democratic ally at any point along their frontiers. Sweden, too, remains democratic, and a section of her press still dares to criticize Germany, but she is a prisoner of the Axis, in a semi-colonial relationship to Germany. Her world markets are cut off by the German conquest of Norway and Denmark; she has just signed a trade agreement with Germany which pushes her inexorably into the German economic orbit, and she has had to allow free passage to German troops on leave from Norwegian duties, an action which was protested yesterday by the British and by the Norwegian government resident in London.

Finland's plight is the hardest of all, for Finland is the only one of the three which has sacrificed thousands of lives for the sake of staying free. Her democratic institutions remain intact, but her economy is disrupted by the loss of her foreign trade, by the cost of rebuilding her devastated towns, and by the effort to rehouse and re-employ hundreds of thousands of refugees from Soviet-occupied territory. Finnish democracy is under almost as great a strain from unemployment and poverty this summer as from Russian planes and guns in last winter's war. It will be a miracle, if Finland and the other imprisoned democracies of Europe can keep their heads above the rising tide of totalitarian powers, unless that power is destroyed by Britain.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

LESSON FROM, KNUDSEN WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—The labors of William S. Knudsen, Edward R. Stettinius and their colleagues are more discussed than understood. Currently there is considerable agitation, both in the press and among certain members of the administration, over the commission's choice of a "preference" rather than a "legal priority" procurement system to expedite defense armament orders. Once the facts are understood, however, this decision of the commission seems an excellent lesson in the wise management of a great defense program.

EASIER WAY FIRST Design and procurement are the two major problems created by every defense program since the Carthaginians sacrificed their hair for bowstrings to be used against the Roman legions of Scipio Africanus. The problem of design lies in the difficulty of getting the military and naval experts to make up their minds which are the best weapons to order. Since the advent of Henry Stimson and Colonel Frank Knox at the War and Navy departments, the defense commission is understood to be finding the going somewhat easier in this respect.

Once it is decided what to order, however, the problem of procurement—of placing the orders and getting them executed as rapidly as possible—still remains. In a modern industrial society, unless it is desired to imitate Germany's example of virtually abandoning the production of consumers' goods, the procurement problem is fantastically complex.

The industrial machine is not geared to take the heavy additional load of armaments production. Bottlenecks develop. Conflicts constantly arise between the requirements of the armament program and the requirements of makers of consumers' goods. The bottlenecks must be broken. The conflicts must somehow be settled in favor of national defense.

The defense commission's co-ordinator of procurement is the able Donald Nelson, whose position as high official of Sears, Roebuck & Co. guarantees broad experience in the entire industrial field. Nelson was well aware of the troubles ahead when he took his job. He made an elaborate study of the entire question and presented findings and recommendations to Knudsen, Stettinius and their colleagues. After careful consultation among themselves and with the President, the commission members decided to try the easier way first.

IF EMERGENCY ARISES Specifically, the commission decided to give a trial to the "preference" system of procurement. Under this system, to take a simple example, the army and navy decide they want a certain item of equipment, to build which a certain kind of machine tool is needed. The defense commission places the order with the manufacturer. The manufacturer reports that he cannot get necessary machine tools because a refrigerator company, preparing to put out a new model, has signed up the machine tool plant's full production. The defense commission then goes to the refrigerator company, asks that presentation of the new model be deferred in the interests of national defense, and obtains voluntary preference for the armament order.

Henry Ford is the only important industrialist who has, so far, refused co-operation in the commission. Orders totaling $1,800,000,000 have been placed with comparative ease. The commission members realize, of course, that trouble may come when they start spending what Knudsen affectionately calls "my $4,000,000,000." Knudsen uses the possession phrase because he was the chief influence in persuading the President to go the whole way with the big appropriations request. It may be imagined that, if trouble does arise, he will not hesitate long to deal with it firmly. The system of procurement by "legal priorities" is being kept in reserve, in fact, for just such an emergency.

Under this system, the defense commission will simply assert the priority of war orders over private orders, without troubling to see operation by negotiation. The experience of Bernard M. Baruch and Charles G. Dawes in the last war demonstrated that such a system cannot be operated merely in segments of the industrial structure. All of industry must be placed under fairly close control. Prices must be carefully watched, since the threat of an assertion of priority in every field makes for an inflationary rush to build up inventories of consumers' goods.

Generally speaking, the commission chose to try the preference system because the other was too cumbersome and complex. It may be stated quite unequivocally, however, that the commission's chief of the part of the President, the part of the President, or the commission members to give industry or the public an easy time at the expense of the national defense. If the necessity arises, the legal priorities system will be resorted to at once.

American Story.

It so happened, a few days ago, in casting an eye over The Constitution files of 50 years ago, seeking an immortal paragraph to insert at the end of a "Silhouettes" column, under the heading "And Fifty Years Ago," I came across an item concerning a certain P. G. Keeney.

The item said that the aforesaid Mr. Keeney had just reached Atlanta from his native home in the M. Keeney who had arrived here from Ireland half a century ago. That his father was still living here—in fact was quite a well-known citizen of Fulton county. So, I asked her to send me some information about the former Irishman and present American. She did.

I published that item, and the following day my telephone rang. The attractive-voiced lady at the other end of the connection informed me she was daughter of the M. Keeney who had arrived here from Ireland half a century ago. That her father was still living here—in fact was quite a well-known citizen of Fulton county. So, I asked her to send me some information about the former Irishman and present American. She did.

Born In County Donegal.

Mr. Keeney, it is revealed, was born on March 3, 1865. Which makes him 75 years old. He was born in County Donegal, Ireland. I'll bet he was a brother of a boy, too, true son of that old sod. He came to America, as properly recorded here, on July 30, 1880, fifty years ago.

For ten years he was associated in business, in Atlanta, with his brother. Then, in 1900, he became deputy clerk of the superior court of Fulton county, serving under Judge George H. Tanner. A little later he was deputy clerk under Judge Arnold Broyles, remaining in that post until 1926.

In 1926 he was made index clerk, in the record room of superior court, under Harvey Hatcher, and he still holds that post.

He has 9 children living, and two grandchildren. And he still tells about the three-month visit he paid to Ireland in 1908 to visit relatives and friends.

There have been few men in Atlanta more active than Phillip Keeney in church and social welfare work. He is a member of the Knights of Columbus, honorary vice president for life of the Holy Name Society, past state president of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, a member of the Elks for four years, and treasurer of St. Vincente De Paul Society for 15 years.

Quite some career, that young man from Ireland who came to Atlanta 50 years ago, served out for himself, wasn't it?

That's What Counts.

It is lives like that lived by Mr. Keeney which make America. Probably, the same year he enjoyed

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

No Right To Belong, Anyway NEW YORK, Aug. 6. Mrs. Roosevelt wrote in her column last Saturday that she had just read a criticism of the American Newspaper Guild, which is run by the Communists, and that, although she agreed with much of it, she would not resign because she had made no effort to contribute anything as a member.

"I am going to try to do so in the future," Mrs. Roosevelt wrote, "because I believe that until you have done your very best to make an organization useful you have no right to leave it."

If Mrs. Roosevelt knew as much as she should about this Trojan horse to which she has decided to continue to pitch hay, she would not leave it. The question whether she will leave it is not for her to decide. The guild constitution contains a trick, or man-trap, clause, stealthily concealed beneath the hypocritical protestations of high purpose and the standard constitutional provisions, which forbids resignation and provides expulsion for those who attempt to do so. I will go into that another time, but for today on this point will admit that, of course, this trap couldn't hold her because she is a privileged character who has no right to belong to a guild of newspaper workers, anyway.

Not Her Occupation

Mrs. Roosevelt is no more eligible for membership in the Newspaper Guild in any honest interpretation of the terms of eligibility than I am for membership in the D. A. R., a thoroughly respectable group from which she has been excluded by her own political act, apparently having decided that she had done her very best to make it useful.

Mrs. Roosevelt was taken into the guild in an honorary status for the ballyhoo value of her adherence. The section of eligibility says that membership shall be for persons who are gainfully employed and devote the major part of their time to their employment in the business. That Mrs. Roosevelt's employment as a columnist is gainful I will readily grant, but nobody will believe, and I doubt that anyone would be dishonest enough to assert, that she devotes the major part of her time to journalism, or, to put it more fairly, that journalism is her occupation.

This union was intended for newspaper people, and, although the Communists have opened its doors to Communists of miscellaneous occupations for the purpose of overwhelming by force of numbers the journalists trapped in the guild, Mrs. Roosevelt still remains ineligible because her implication in journalism is strictly an egg-money activity. The same material written by Mrs. George Spelvin never would have been printed, much less paid for, and it is significant that her genius lay dormant until the election of 1932.

It Comes To This—

It comes down to this, therefore: The prestige of the presidency of the United States is here being used to give aid and comfort to a group of Communist conspirators to the detriment and distress of a great many decent, loyal Americans employed as journalists. Only because she is the wife of the President is Mrs. Roosevelt gainfully employed as a journalist, and it is the President's wife is she a member of the Newspaper Guild.

Moreover, when she did join a special reservation was made for her whereby, contrary to the constitution and in contrast to the terms imposed on legitimate members, she would not be required to go on strike, if one should be called to compel the reinstatement of an incorrigible, incompetent and lazy office boy or for any other reason. The regular newspapermen and women, however, would be required to strike and lose pay, and perhaps eventually their living jobs or suffer the most hateful persecution—physical and mental—at the hands of the Communist politicians in control.

Mrs. Roosevelt just doesn't belong, and the first step toward making the guild useful would be to get rid of the ineligible, starting with her.

Real Jobs Lure Judges

Jobs on construction work in the Panama Canal Zone are luring small-town judges away from their courts. Judges with salaries varying from $5 to $30 monthly are flocking to the terminal cities, Colon and Balboa, to obtain eligibility cards with the Central Labor Office. The attraction is $50 to $100 a month for laborers and much more for clerical and skilled workers. Judge Manuel Diaz E., of the First Circuit Court, has written the Supreme Court suggesting that the laws be revised to permit schoolmasters to be judges.

ONE WORD MORE

In the absence of Ralph McGill today's column is written by W. M. (Pop) Hines, city editor of The Constitution.

By W. M. (POP) HINES.

A FORTUNE AWAITS Of late my mind has been running to some sort of discovery in the field of medical science that would ease the bodily aggravation that comes from a visit to the woods and the resultant disturbing lumps and scratches. In fact, along with thousands of others, the search is for a method of finding alleviation from the pests known as redbugs or chiggers. It would seem after all the years that man has been forced to suffer from these infinitesimal disturbers that someone should have come across a definite way to combat them so a fellow may enjoy the beauties of nature without the uncomfortable consequences. There's sure money for the man who hits upon the right idea.

These warm summer evenings of late I have been imposing upon my good friend and conferee, Herman Hancock, and his charming wife, by driving out to their home on the Buford highway to cool off. Now, Mr. and Mrs. Hancock have a delightful porch on the rear of their home. From its comfortable elevation one can look down upon the gurgling waters of Peachtree creek. Just below their porch there once was located a mill. The foundations are still in Peachtree creek and the waters of that famous course tumble over the heavy oak timbers of that abandoned mill site and up from the creek bottom come sounds that do more to soothe the savage breast and a mind tired by the jangling of the telephone than anything anyone has so far suggested. I like the Hancock's porch, but I like more the gurgling waters of Peachtree creek and frequently have been impelled to wander down to its banks and dabble a tired foot in its cool waters.

REDBUG FARM After one or two excursions from the screened security of that porch I have decided for the remainder of the summer to set myself in an easy chair. Mr. Hancock in selecting a name for his country estate hit upon calling it "Redbug Farm." He made no mistake. But with all his versatility friend Hancock either lacks the genius or the mental energy to put his mind to finding a cure for the bite of the redbug. He has come forward with a variety of suggestions, from spraying the clothes with a sort of smelly concoction, to painting with iodine, powdering with sulphur, and even raiding the bottle in which his wife keeps her nail polish. He has had me try them all until at times my body seemed to have the appearance of a spotted leopard. Defeated, I appealed for counsel from the erudite Harold Martin and the unperforable Jack Spalding. As usual, they have been of little help. Martin advises "pay no attention to them" and Spalding offered the only practical solution to the whole problem. He says, "Just scratch."

This advice coming from such urban authorities on country life may be sufficient, but it would seem to one whose acquaintance with the redbug is becoming more and more personal as the summer advances that there are more scientific means of combating the pests than either Martin's disregard for them or Spalding's scratching or the pseudo medical methods of the owner of "Redbug Farm."

WHO WANTS TO SWEAT? A suggestion that has come forward is for the person wishing to overcome the redbug is to get up a good sweat and then jump into a bath, and the problem from then on becomes very simple. But what office worker, softened by years behind a desk, wants to get up a good sweat working in some other person's yard or chopping wood for the winter fireplace? It sounds very much like a suggestion with a very dubious motive, and when I go calling on my friends I neither want to work in their yard or saw their wood. I desire only to commune with nature and to enjoy their companionship minus redbugs.

All of which leads to the very definite opinion that someone should do something about the redbugs. And, anyway, what becomes of them in winter? One can go through the woods in winter when one doesn't want to be in the woods, and never be bothered. Must one migrate with the season? It is something somebody should do something about. Perhaps there should be a law.

This discussion of redbugs may not seem to be very vital when there is so much to consider of world affairs, but the fact is that when the bite of a redbug is itching it is far more important just then than all the blitzkriegs in the world.

Peace Must Wait Till the Top-Dog Shares the Under-Dog's Ideas

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

When earth's second man envied and killed the third, he set the pattern for half of human history; when some other man, thirsting for revenge, murdered a neighbor who had killed his brother, he set the pattern for the remainder.

When we read the story of mountain feuds, we wonder why one family continues to lust for the blood of another long after the original cause of conflict has been forgotten. The answer is that the minds of all men function in much the same way, under similar circumstances, and the mental attitude of each is determined largely by the role in which fate casts him.

Enslaved and subjugated men believe in liberty and risk their lives to gain it, but they are seldom satisfied with liberty alone after it has been won. Their mental attitude has changed with their condition, and now they glory in their strength and make plans to subjugate their neighbors. The liberty that seems precious is one's own—not that of some inferior fellow who speaks another language. History repeats itself because human nature repeats itself.

When victorious Napoleon marched into Prussia, his loot included the sword of Frederick the Great. The Prussians never forgave him, and when Bismarck had welded the German states into a nation and provoked a war with France, his victory was sweeter because it satisfied a thirst for revenge.

That victory seemed to determine the destiny of Europe, but no; fate merely turned to France with the grim instruction: "Your serve."

It was the Frenchman's turn to dream of revenge, and the oldsters, at least, dreamed of it and planned for it. In the darkest days of the first World War, it was the hope of revenge that inspired the implacable old Clemenceau, and in the end he got it in full measure.

Now Hitler in his turn has avenged past defeats, and once more the fate of Europe is settled "forever." But the most certain fact in this uncertain world is that every loyal Frenchman is already dreaming of revenge for the hurt and shame he suffers now.

Is there no end? Not until victors learn forgiveness by their generosity. And that will not happen until men and nations accept the Man of Nazareth as their model and master.

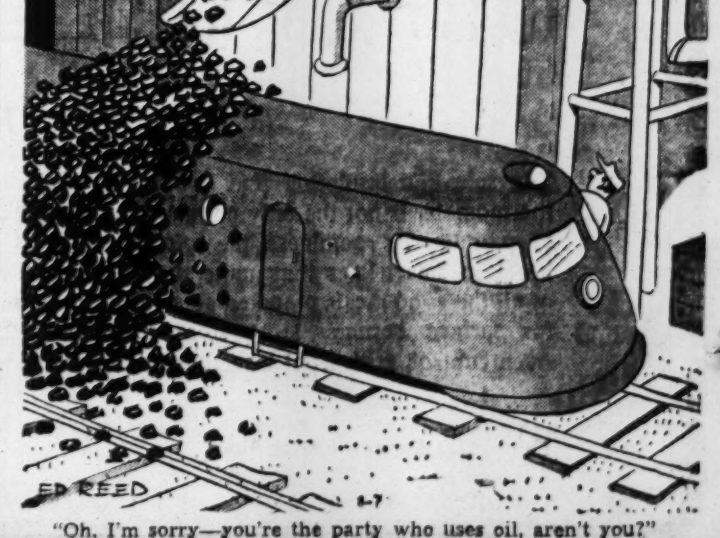

Bees Capture Market

Alighting among hundreds of farmers attending to their weekly trading, a swarm of bees captured the market in Roscrea, Eire. Dozens of people were stung and cattle ran amok. The queen bee alighted on the license plate of a truck owned by a Dublin traveler and all the bees crawled aboard. After an exciting drive through the streets in an attempt to shake off the winged hitch-hikers, the Dubliner gave up with thousands still buzzing around the car. A Roscrea man collected the bees with a sheet and hive.

Death Warrant Burned

Mrs. Henrietta Dielman, a nurse who was sentenced to death by the Germans during World War I at the same time as her friend, Nurse Cavell, has died in Aberdovey, Scotland, aged 78. Mrs. Dielman was in Brussels at the beginning of the war and in August, 1915, was sentenced to death by a German military court for helping British troops. She spoke German fluently and escaped, taking her death warrant with her. Mrs. Dielman burnt it a few months ago, saying, "I don't want to pose as a public heroine."

OFF THE RECORD—By Ed Reed

"Oh, I'm sorry—you're the party who uses oil, aren't you?"

Was a Burglar But It's Too Late for Arrest.

Burglars are reprehensible criminals, of course. But I'm afraid I'd make vigorous efforts to dodge jury duty in a burglary case. Guilty conscience, for I was a burglar once. In fact, all one winter. The statute of limitations, which took effect in my case years ago, makes me safe from arrest, so now it can be told.

I was a lonely lad of about 15. My folks decided to spend the winter in their cottage in a mountain summer resort, whence all others had fled.

I was an avid reader. I'd read anything from a horse doctoring book to a mail order catalog. I'd read the official announcements pasted up on the post office wall.

There was no public library. There was no bookstore. The drugstore didn't handle magazines as drugstores do now. Indeed, there were few magazines published—The Century, the Atlantic, Frank Munsey's small group. They'd have found no customers because the only people in the mountain village who ever read anything beyond a patent medicine wrapper were the two preachers and the doctor.

But there were about a hundred summer cottages, boarded up and deserted for the long winter. They were flimsy structures, with cheap hardware. It was easy for an ingenious youth to fashion a key which would unlock anything but a patent safe.

I reasoned that there would be something to read in most of those cold and deserted houses. The summer folk took away with them everything a mountaineer would consider worth stealing, but I doubted they'd pay excess baggage rates on magazines and paper-backed novels.

I was right. Fully half the cottages contained from six to a dozen back number magazines. Too many, to my regret, duplicated. There were a number of books. Some of them good, substantial literature.

I did not steal like a thief in the night. I practiced in the daytime. I'd take my loot home—it was too cold to read in a fireless cottage—and spend happy hours. I kept a list of what treasures came from which cottage—and back to that cottage they went. I was a fairly honest burglar. My folks used to wonder where I acquired my reading matter and it was necessary to do some skillful lying. It seem to get by.

I think my winter's career of burglary kept me from going badly or running away from home. I have never suffered extreme pangs of remorse. After all "the thief made restitution." And I am sure most of my victims—many of them, good friends in summer—would have granted ready forgiveness.

Sought That 'A'.

Because of confusion or mixing up of mail addresses, I have received a cordial invitation to join the SPEDSQUA, to which I have mailed an enthusiastic acceptance.

In case you're not keeping abreast of the times, the aforesaid initials represent the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America.

There are no dues. That's one reason I accepted. For several years, I have declined invitations to become one with this or that on handsomely engraved stationery, with a formidable list of trustees or sponsors including Astors and Vanderbilts and du Ponts, because a check for $25—not necessarily indorsed by the cashier—was expected as a matter of faith and good form.

But I'm happy to join the SPEDSQUA. Because there's nothing I enjoy more than barber shop quartets—if I don't have to listen to them.

Time was when I enjoyed—and joined in—a really good rendition of "Sweet Adeline." But I never felt quite welcome. I was invariably asked whether I was trying to sing first or second tenor, baritone or bass. My explanation that I was equally good at all and was just playing around seldom satisfied our quartet leader, a husky big bum from the stove foundry, who suggested I wash out that big pitcher used for pouring water over a shampoo addict's head and go around the corner and get it full of beer. And darn little foam.

Star or Nothing?

I think I'll be a silent and non-attendant member of the barber-shop quartet organization. I'll get my haircuts around 10 a. m. when the vocalists are working at their regular trades.

After all, what is a fourth of a quartet? Where does he arrive? If I can't be everything I won't play. My bathroom has acoustics which attract architects from all the world to study. Once in there, with the door bolted, I can do the whole quartet in "Rigoletto," to my complete satisfaction. I have even essayed the sextet of "Lucia," but a few spots in the ensemble evaded me.

Maybe I'll be forced by carping criticism to abandon my art. Perhaps I'll take up the phonograph. There's one on the market which plays 12 records without my having to get up and change them. I'm going to buy one.

I can wait, ranking with revenge from criticisms, until the household is near wrapt in slumber. Then I can start those 12 records, steal away far back into the vast estate, and sleep with the pups. They're nice pups and never express opinions on my singing.

Good Morning—By Louie D. Newton

"There's a man in town," an old-fashioned phrase, which always denoted a fact of interest, may well be employed in noting the presence in Atlanta for a few days of Dr. Charles W. Daniel, here with Mrs. Daniel, for their annual visit during their vacation with their daughter, Mrs. F. D. Burge. Having achieved top rank in the art of preaching, Dr. Daniel must be acknowledged as a man in his own rights. Everywhere regarded as one of the foremost expository preachers of our day and generation, he lends emphasis to his every sermon by the integrity of his daily walk before God and men. Fittingly may we employ the words of Bobby Burns in saying of Dr. Daniel:

From scenes like these old Scotia's grandeur springs,
That makes her loved at home,
Princes and lords are but the breath of kings,
An honest man's the noblest work of God.

The rank is but the guinea's stamp,
The man's the gowd for a' that.

A prince can make a belted knight,
A marquis, duke, and a' that;
But an honest man's aboon his might,
Gude faith, he mauna fa' that.

Pastor of the First Baptist Church in Atlanta for two decades, Dr. Daniel made lasting contribution to the deeper and finer qualities of life in this city and section. Coming here from pastorates in Texas, Kentucky and Arkansas, he seemed a part of our very life, and none of us ever thought of his leaving, but in 1928 he answered the call to the historic First Baptist Church of Richmond, where he ministered until 1934, when he accepted the invitation to return to his native Arkansas as pastor of the First Baptist church at Eldorado, where he is regarded as that city's first citizen, and where one guesses he will write the crowning chapter of his illustrious career.

Possessing the courage of deep conviction and uncompromising allegiance to what he believes, to be the truth, Dr. Daniel has long exercised far-reaching leadership.

ANTS All over the Kitchen?

Here's how to get rid of them. First, keep floor, shelves, cupboards, etc., free from bread crumbs, sugar, etc. Second, sprinkle Bee Brand Insect Powder in corners and along the back edges of shelves, back of and under the sink, refrigerator and stove. Blow it into cracks and crevices, back of and under wall boards.

Build powder barriers between the ants' nests and places where they feed. Repeat these treatments regularly. Bee Brand Insect Powder kills ants, roaches and other crawling insects quickly—yet it's entirely safe to use. Insist on the genuine Bee Brand Insect Powder—in the red and yellow can. It's sold with a guarantee of satisfaction or your money back. Buy a can today.

The Pulse of the Public

The Constitution invites expression of opinion by its readers. This column is open for that purpose. All communications must be signed and all are subject to editing for conservation of space. Brevity makes argument effective and impels attention.

LOCAL MINISTERS OFFER DIFFERENT DRAFT PLAN

Editor Constitution: All thoughtful persons seem to be in agreement that we must have some form of selective draft for the necessary military training of our eligible soldiers in America, and that we must have it quickly. General Pershing, in his speech the other night, used the word "lot," the method, used in the World War. It was effective, but it seems to be such an unintelligent way of going about it.

Would some such plan as I am about to suggest be both intelligent and democratic? Let there be an immediate registration of all men between the ages of 18 and 30. Let each state in the Union be assigned a proportionate quota of men to be called for one year's training in all branches of our military forces. Let each state be divided into districts, the districts to be under a draft board made up of the very highest, finest and fairest patriotic Americans, who will serve without pay.

For example, Atlanta and Fulton county would be one district in Georgia, and a definite quota would be required from this district. Let all registrants the rich and the poor, the employed and the unemployed, the educated and the uneducated, be called to appear before this draft board, and these questions be asked and these situations be inquired into: What are you doing at present? Are you employed in some vital industry or business organization? Have you dependents whose sole support you are? Could you leave your present situation for a year's training without disrupting the industry or the business organization in which you are employed?

Are you at present unemployed, or part employed? Is your job of a temporary, day to day, or week to week kind? Are you pursuing a definite career, or life plan, or are you just trying to earn a living at whatever work you can find to do? Would your dependents be supported by your military pay, as well as you are now able to support them by your daily work?

It seems to me that some such plan would be both fair and intelligent, both democratic and American. We are up against a regimented world, and to get ready to face it, we must submit to some form of regimentation. America is the next item on Hitler's program, and whether or not we refuse to recognize the fact, Germany is already at war with America, and what we do we must do quickly. At least, in the face of the present chaotic conditions prevailing in Washington, the above plan will give us something to be thinking about.

Minister, Peachtree Church,

DESTINY OF AMERICA IN HANDS OF LAWYERS.

Editor Constitution: America's destiny is in the hands of a bunch of lawyers! Will they listen to a man like General Pershing or one like Lindbergh?

It's true that no one can question what a lawyer does now, but the time will come when America will!

If we change parties, we get a different set of lawyers. Let us hope and pray that we have in the senate and the congress enough good lawyers to look after America's and the world's best interest.

EDITORIAL—"AND ALL'S WELL" CONGRATULATIONS

Editor Constitution: To The Constitution and the author of the leading editorial in this morning's issue, "And All's Well," I would like to offer my sincere congratulations. In spirit, literary flavor and eloquence the editorial is worthy of The Constitution's best traditions.

To my mind it is unthinkable that a nation with a Westminster Abbey can be conquered.

CONGRESS TOO SLOW. WRITES THIS GEORGIAN

Editor Constitution: I am a great admirer of your editorials. I think the compulsory training bill should be passed in a hurry and get things a going. Congress works so slow I am afraid Hitler will be here before they get waked up. Since the President sees so far ahead of congress I believe he ought to be given power so he could get things done. We need universal co-operation with the President both in national and state affairs.

Any man that has ever fought the President should not be elected for bailiff no matter if he does agree to co-operate with him while asking for office. We need men in office true blue and not the kind that changes his policies to get votes.

BRANDS "SWING MUSIC" FOR OF PATRIOTISM

Editor Constitution: Now that our government officials are waking up to the fact we need an army, navy and air force, and are copying Hitler's Panzer tactics, Stuka bombing and parachute jumping, it is strange that some of the experts have not taken cognizance of another—a most important—Hitler strategy. It will be remembered that early in America's "swing" period, Germany banned all such "music" declaring that it was not to the advantage of German youth to listen to it.

In news dispatches from France, it was stated that German troops cut through French divisions, cheered on by rousing march tunes. Since "swing" is composed of outrageous discords that harmonize only the feet and not the faculties, it should be quite evident that we will never be able to defend our country unless we can harmonize heads and hearts as well as feet.

We may build up the greatest army in the world, the greatest navy and the greatest air fleet. But without fervent patriotism, we will be as vulnerable as China without arms, or France without young leaders.

Talk about your Fifth Columns! The Youth of America has been deliberately sabotaged by inharmonious, unpatriotic jazz tunes, with a deliberate suppression of martial music; instead of producing fervent patriotism, in the

Would a GASOLINE PIPE LINE in Georgia Help You or HURT YOU?

Of course it would hurt the railroads! Of course it would hurt railroad employees! But the question is, would it hurt YOU? Would it hurt your schools, your counties, your cities, your merchants, your ports, your highways? The answer is YES.

The question arises because the Southeastern Pipe Line Company (owned by two large oil companies dominated by the Mellon millions of Pittsburgh and the Dawes millions of Chicago) has demanded the right to condemn private property to put such a line through Georgia, and the Supreme Court has denied it. Now the pipe lines are about to ask the Legislature of Georgia to give this power, not only to the Southeastern but to any other gasoline pipe line company that may come.

Question: Will gasoline pipe lines reduce the price you pay for gasoline?
Answer: No—according to the sworn testimony of oil company officials in hearings before the Interstate Commerce Commission, and according to the whole history of the industry. Any saving in transportation cost is just that much profit made by the gasoline pipe line companies for their owners—the oil companies.

Question: Will gasoline pipe lines take big gasoline trucks off the highways?
Answer: No—the pipe lines would not deliver gasoline to consumer or filling station. The gasoline would be stored in large storage tanks, and distribution would be made from there all over Georgia, largely by truck. These trucks would not only have to be more numerous, but larger, and Georgia's roads would be even more crowded than now with huge gasoline trucks.

Question: What result would gasoline pipe lines have on employment?
Answer: The railroads now employ about 23,000 persons in Georgia. The Southeastern Pipe Line Company would employ about 100 persons. Let the loss in gasoline traffic to the railroads would cause at least 2,300 railway employees to be thrown out of work. Hundreds of employees of ports, hauling companies, and small independent gasoline companies would also lose their jobs.

Question: What result would gasoline pipe lines have on Georgia merchants?
Answer: It would mean a yearly loss in trade of more than $3,000,000, which these 2,300 railway employees now spend with their home-town merchants. This does not include trade losses from affiliated workers, nor losses in purchases made by the railways themselves.

Question: Would gasoline pipe lines hurt Georgia's schools?
Answer: Yes—the taxes paid last year by the railroads for schools educated 15,192 children. If railroads' earnings are cut, their taxable value is cut—and these school taxes would be seriously reduced. Informed school authorities are therefore opposing gasoline pipe lines.

Question: Would other Georgia tax revenues be cut?
Answer: Yes—there would be a tremendous slash in revenue. In 1939 railroads paid in property taxes alone in Georgia $2,662,321.97. Georgia railroads are assessed at $79,047,072.00 for taxation. Gasoline pipe lines would drastically cut the railroads' earnings, making them unable to pay their taxes near their high taxes. For this reason, nearly one hundred of Georgia's County Boards or Commissioners have passed resolutions opposing gasoline pipe lines.

Question: Who would spend more money in Georgia—the railroads or the gasoline pipe lines?
Answer: The railroads. During an average year, the railroads of Georgia spend in this state nearly forty-five million dollars, as follows: $33,672,143 for wages and salaries; $5,571,188 for materials, cross ties, lumber, and supplies bought from Georgia farmers and merchants; $3,560,968 for taxes, including school taxes. All of this money remains in circulation in Georgia. And while the railroads spend nearly six million dollars for purchases and supplies, can anyone imagine a gasoline pipe line being a customer for anything that Georgia raises or produces?

Question: Would gasoline pipe lines hurt the ports of Savannah and Brunswick?
Answer: Yes—the Mayor and County Commissioners in both localities have presented figures to show that gasoline shipped in tankers forms a large part of the business in these ports. Since all gasoline pipe lines through Georgia would originate in other states, such pipe lines would force the abandonment of extensive wharf facilities in Georgia ports. Tax losses to the state and county, and the unemployment of many port workers would be inevitable results.

Question: Are gasoline pipe lines hazardous to life and property?
Answer: Yes—serious accidents have occurred from the explosion of petroleum pipe lines. In Texas last winter a pipe line blew up for a distance of 32 miles, including a public highway. Could you sleep peacefully with a gasoline pipe line laid near your home?

Question: Is the construction of gasoline pipe lines in the best interest of Georgia's progress?
Answer: If crippling the backbone of our transportation system—if putting thousands of people out of jobs and into the streets—if the loss of millions of dollars in revenue now being paid by the railroads is considered progress—then it can be of only one type—backward.

Wake up, Georgians! Stop this invasion of our state before it is too late. You don't want your school term shortened and your teachers unpaid—you don't want your taxes increased—you don't want to see thousands of honest Georgians lose their jobs and your merchants and farmers lose thousands of dollars!

The pipe line companies plan to ask our legislature to change the existing law and give them the right to cross your highways—the right to take your property without your consent. Tell your candidates for the Legislature that in your interests as tax-payers and citizens you feel that the pipe line companies' request should be refused. AND DO IT NOW!

The Army IN GEORGIA

Lieutenant Colonel Hamner Houston, acting signal officer of the First Corps Area in Boston, will assume command of the Army post at Fort McPherson August 18 to succeed Brigadier General Robert O. Van Horn who retired last month.

At the same time he will take over active leadership of the 62nd Signal Battalion, which has filled the post since June when the 2nd Battalion of the 22nd Infantry was transferred to Fort McClellan, Ala.

Colonel Houston formerly was assistant commandant of the signal school at Fort Monmouth. His command of the 62nd automatically places him in charge of the post, which has not had a regular commander since General Van Horn's retirement.

The 62nd Signal, now on maneuvers, was organized in October, 1939, from the 51st Battalion and was stationed at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., from which post it was sent to Fort McPherson.

Acting head of the post at Fort McPherson is Major Owen Summers, executive officer of District B, CCC. Major B. F. Hurlless also was in temporary command following General Van Horn's retirement.

McPHERSON TO ESTABLISH RECRUIT CAMP.

A recruit camp, capable of handling 200 enlistments each day, will be established today at Fort McPherson and will serve to administer Army oaths to new men who had applied for service at recruiting stations in this vicinity.

Harper, camp adjutant, this procedure became necessary in order to relieve pressure on Fort Benning where officers are swamped with recruits from the entire Fourth Corps Area.

New enlistments will remain at the Fort McPherson camp only long enough to be sworn in, Major Harper said. Immediately they will be sent to Fort Benning, where the army is filling one of its two armored corps divisions to maximum strength.

Recruiting sergeants, it was pointed out, are not permitted to administer oaths. The establishment of a station at the local fort, under the direction of First Lieutenant Paul L. Turner, will eliminate the necessity of administering the oaths at Fort Benning.

The division will send its own recruiting parties into Georgia and Alabama communities. Indications are that the armored force is to grow from two to ten divisions as the army expands. Particularly, the division wants men of a mechanical turn of mind. In it are mechanized units representative of all the army's largest branches—the engineers, the cavalry, the infantry and the artillery. All personnel rides behind armor in motorized vehicles of the latest design.

Vocational schools will be conducted by the division for development of radio operators, mechanics for gas and diesel motors, welders, draftsmen and operators of scout cars and tanks.

COLONEL WEAVER ARRIVES FOR DUTY AT FT. BENNING FORT BENNING, Aug. 6.—Colonel James R. N. Weaver, infantry, has arrived for duty with the Second Armored Division and will command the 68th Armored Regiment, which contains the tank elements Colonel Weaver commanded at Fort Benning for several years. He left the post last spring, at the conclusion of Third Army maneuvers, to become senior instructor of the Ohio National Guard.

Other changes over the weekend involving officer personnel at Fort Benning included:

First Lieutenant Harold H. Boros, medical reserve, arrived for one year's active duty with the Second Armored Division. Captain Kenneth W. Treacy, field artillery, arrived for duty with the Second Armored Division. First Lieutenant Clyde L. Jones, field artillery, arrived for duty with the Second Armored Division.

GEORGIAN APPOINTED RESERVE OFFICER

Appointment of one Georgian as an infantry reserve officer and the promotion of two others in the same branch of the service was announced yesterday by Fourth Corps Area headquarters. Trumie Culpepper Elliott, of Barnesville, was named a second lieutenant, while Madison Cash Thomas, of Commerce, and James Henry Smith, of Ashland, were made first lieutenants.

Jurors Weigh Chappell Fate In Peek Case

county equipment, that Bill Chappell had given Peek quantities of prison camp supplies and had said Bill and his father made much money in their dealings with Peek.

Arguments attacking the state's case were made by James V. Carmichael, of Marietta; Chief of Counsel Willis Smith, of Carrollton, and Judge John S. Wood, of Canton. The prosecution spokesmen were Solicitor General Grady Vandiviere and Mayor L. M. ("Rip") Blair.

Mayor Blair charged that "graft, collusion, bribery, embezzlement, road house debauchery, perjury, subornation of perjury and paying of witnesses to come here" was in the background of this defense.

"They say we can call judges, clerks, justices of the peace, and we can tell your Mr. McMillan to go to hell because we are the political power of Carroll county," Blair asserted.

First clash of the trial's oratory was between fiery Solicitor General Grady Vandiviere and Defense Counsel James V. Carmichael, who, with eloquence and conviction in his voice, charged that the state's tactics were seeking to nullify ancient democratic rights of trial and counsel.

Vandiviere openly directed his fire personally at Willis Smith, chief defense counsel, who he charged with being "both Doctor Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." The solicitor followed this with the assertion:

"I have at times in my career felt that I owe an apology to you people who put me here. I feel that I owe an apology because I have not joined Hamp Chappell as a party defendant in this case."

Carmichael immediately moved that the jury be excluded and, when this had been done, called for the court reporter and dictated a resume of Vandiviere's remarks. Then he addressed Judge Hawkins:

"This attitude of the solicitor is not supported by any evidence. There is not the slightest indication that Hamp Chappell participated in any crime charged here. The remark is highly inflammatory and calculated to prejudice the jury."

Mistrial Motion. He submitted a formal motion for mistrial, which was overruled, thus laying the basis for an appeal in the event of conviction.

Vandiviere charged that Willis Smith was "the Mussolini, the Stalin" of Carroll county and that he had taken the attitude he was "the boss." The solicitor also recalled the remark attributed to Smith by witness Alvin Pitts: "Tell those Cobb county folks to go to hell."

"But in Cobb county," cried Vandiviere, "Willis Smith is just a human being like you and me." Vandiviere traced all of the evidence, and insisted on the truth of Convict Lewis Turner's story that he was with Bill Chappell, Jason Clark, John Holmsombeck and the Peeks on the night of their death.

Carmichael, however, analyzed Turner's story, pointed out what he termed points at which it was not corroborated, as required by law, and then declared Turner was repudiated on all four statutory grounds, namely that he had a generally bad character, had made contradictory statements, the evidence had been frequently assailed by him and that he had been convicted nine times of crimes involving moral turpitude.

Defends Sheriff. The youthful Carmichael, a familiar figure about the state capitol as legislator and vice chairman of the house Economy Committee, undertook as a Cobb countian the defense of Smith, of Carroll county, under the blows of Vandiviere. He defended, however, Sheriff George McMillan and County Patrolman Esmer Ward who have been frequently assailed by Smith, as having done their duty and nothing more.

Smith plunged into his reply to Vandiviere's assault immediately after the noon recess.

"This is the most unscrupulous, the most unfair attack ever made upon counsel in this county," he told the jury. "It is only done to prejudice you against me, and I would not reply except that otherwise I should be unfaithful to my client."

At a later point he reverted to the solicitor's quotation of him that "Cobb county people can go to hell," and said this related only to officers who had been repudiated by Smith, as having done their duty and nothing more.

"In such circumstances I still say," Smith thundered, "The law says you can take your shotgun and resist illegal arrest."

Defines Murder. He defined murder from a statutory point of view and insisted: "You cannot legally convict Bill Chappell in this case."

Delivering the principal address for the defense, Smith detailed the evidence to length and lashed out at Turner, the principal witness. He insisted the story as presented by the prosecution was fantastic.

"Turner is subject to alcoholic imagination and delirium," declared the lawyer. "Men in that condition come to believe the horrible things they imagine."

The defense strongly attacked the action of Captain Arthur Hutchins, of the state patrol, in obtaining clemency for Leander Leach and Henry McGuire, former inmates of the Carroll county prison camp who testified for the prosecution, and, especially, for failing to remember at first under questioning that he had urged favorable consideration for them by the prison board.

Carmichael, in particular, referred to Leach's pink-stained fingernails, and to McGuire's having been convicted of an offense involving his own daughter.

Records of Carroll county's heavy purchases of lumber from Merle Edgeworth, a defense alibi witness, were upon the jury rail while the arguments proceeded. Also displayed were photographs of the bodies of the Peeks, parts of the wreckage and the scene thereabouts. Another object was Mrs. Peek's pale blue hat with faded blood spots on the bell-like band.

Judge Raps Solicitor. Familiar with the relationships throughout this region, spectators showed especial interest when Judge Wood, who is Vandiviere's uncle and a former solicitor general of the same circuit, hotly attacked his nephew's conduct of the case.

"There is nothing in the code of Georgia that says a solicitor shall be a Spanish Inquisitor or bound an old man," Wood declared. "There is nothing here that requires a shrewd and smart solicitor to turn detective."

He referred in this particular to John Holmsombeck's arrest and questioning in the Canton courthouse in May.

Mrs. Peek, whom Holmsombeck is accused of helping to strangle, could, declared Wood, "have taken that old man by one hand and thrown him in the Chattahoochee river."

He referred throughout astutely to the logic of the prosecution's theory that Chappell had "taken so many witnesses with him," in carrying out a murder.

AROUND Atlanta

WITH THE CONSTITUTION STAFF

All city political candidates were invited yesterday to address the Ormewood Park Civic Club at its meeting at 8 o'clock tomorrow night at the Anne E. West school. H. B. Andrews, president, said each would be given a chance to speak briefly.

Woman's Missionary Society of the Grove Park Baptist church and Sunbeam Band will meet at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the church.

Atlanta Commercial Club will meet at 6:30 o'clock tonight at the Robert Fulton hotel. Miss Mildred Day, president, will preside. The program will feature the showing of a film, "Refreshments Through the Years."

Annual reunion of descendants of William Tolleson will be held Sunday at Oxford Lake, Anniston, Alabama.

Forty-nine retired railroad conductors, members of Division 180, Order of Railway Conductors, will be guests of honor at a dinner-dance at 6:30 o'clock Friday night at the Henry Grady hotel. The event will also mark the 72nd anniversary of the founding of the order.

Bank clearings yesterday totaled $7,200,000, an increase of $500,000 over the same day a year ago. The Atlanta Clearing House Association reported.

Annual reunion of the Camp and Lindley families will be held Sunday at the Grant Park pavilion.

Exhibition of tropical water colors by Charles Hammond, young Mississippi artist, is now on display at the Carnegie Library.

Annual "Miss Atlanta Junior" beauty contest, to select the prettiest girl between five and 10 years of age, will be held at 4 o'clock next Sunday afternoon at Lakewood Park. The youngsters will parade in bathing suits.

at the COURTHOUSE

What's in a name? Maybe nothing, but the grand jury yesterday returned a true bill of indictment against Shack Bugg. The offense charged was that Shack had been writing the "bug"—otherwise known as the lottery game.

Proposed extension of West Peachtree street is to be considered by the county commissioners at their regular meeting this afternoon. City council recently adopted a resolution requesting co-operation of the county in carrying the street through to Buckhead to relieve traffic on Peachtree and Piedmont avenues.

D. M. Wright, of St. Louis, Mo., a brother-in-law of George Allen Maddox, county probation officer, exhibited his films of big game hunting in Africa last night to the Pilot Club at its hall at Stewart avenue and Pierce street. Wright is a frequent visitor in Atlanta.

Paul Donehoo, Fulton corner, was reported much better yesterday. Stricken with a heart attack last week, he is confined to his home at 133 Huntington road. He is still not able to receive visitors, it was said.

at the STATE CAPITOL

Approximately 600 patients already have been moved into the new hospital for the insane at Milledgeville, Braswell Deen, director of the State Department of Public Welfare, said yesterday. The building will house 3,000 patients when completed. It is part of a $5,000,000 expansion program nearing completion at the institution.

The State Purchasing Department yesterday opened bids on approximately $400,000 worth of food for the 16 institutions in the University System of Georgia. N. J. Cowart, purchasing representative, said most of the bids were for food for the period from September 1 to January 1, 1941. Forty-seven bids were opened.

Georgia Voters Said To Await 'Band Wagon'

Political Expert Says Rush to Leader Will Be Tremendous.

Oldsters in politics predicted freely yesterday "one of the biggest band-wagon votes in Georgia history" would mark the September 11 Democratic primary.

"While the trend is hard to discern now," said a man who has been in the capitol during some 15 campaigns, "just wait until later when it begins to look like John Doe or Richard Roe—boy, the band-wagon rush will be tremendous."

This seasoned observer cited as significant reports that while many automobiles flaunted gubernatorial favorite stickers several weeks ago, many of these had been ripped off.

"While it's true some of them were pulled off because they were put there by someone other than the owner," he said, "many of them were removed because the owner has not decided yet who he'll support. They'll reappear later when the band wagon starts rolling."

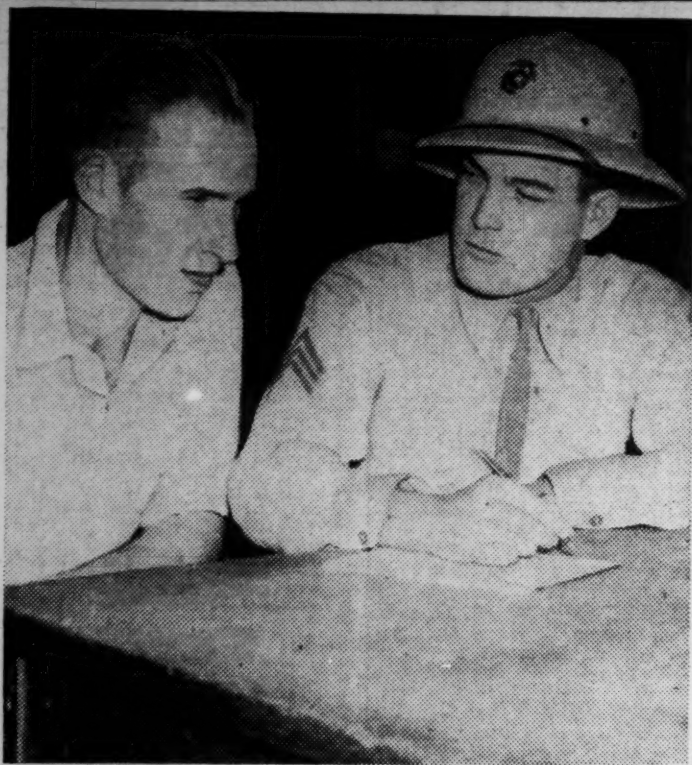

Jobs Jeopardized.

The political students say also the primary will record a sizable number of "silent votes" cast by persons who might jeopardize their own state jobs, or those of relatives, if they became vociferous in support of the wrong—losing—candidate.

While the four candidates for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination advanced their campaigns in stump tours, the forces seeking Georgia support for Republican presidential nominee Wendell Willkie pressed forward.

Gubernatorial Candidate Abit Nix told an American audience that Talmadge forces were behind legislation aimed at consolidation of Georgia's 159 counties. He proposed monthly audits of the Highway Department, copies to be posted in the ordinary's office in all the counties.

Highway Department. Columbus Roberts, at Cuthbert, said if he won the governorship he would put the Highway Department "on a sound business basis even if it takes a major operation to do it," adding that under his regime the agency would be free of politics and "it wouldn't be necessary for delegations of SUCCESS—He did it the hard way, but he finally made it. When Jesse Cowan, of Conyers, decided he wanted to join the Marines, the best way he could figure out to do it was to write to the President and tell him about it. So he did, which set the wheels turning until finally Sergeant John T. Pilcher, right, went down to Jesse's house at Conyers and told him to come on up and be examined and fill out the necessary papers. Jesse is shown at last at the Marine recruiting office here.

citizens to swarm the Highway building to beg for roads."

Addressing the Georgia women's Democratic Club here last night, Eugene Talmadge said that without any additional taxes he would pay local school systems all money due them by March 1, 1941, if he were elected. He said the education of Georgia's children should "never be made a political football again."

Also addressing the women Democrats, Hugh Howell reaffirmed his stand for the Democratic presidential-vice presidential ticket and said to vote otherwise would "turn this state back 20 years." He expressed opposition to a sales tax, said it was not needed because Georgia's current income was $1,000,000 "every Saturday night."

Citrus Wage-Hour Rules 'Acceptable'

LAKELAND, Fla., Aug. 6.—(P) The Florida citrus commission was told today by its attorney, John Bull, Tampa, that the industry apparently will be able to work satisfactorily under the wage-hour law as it is now interpreted in Washington.

Bull, reporting on recent hearings in Washington and on subsequent developments, said that citrus operators now have a total exemption of 28 weeks, or seven months, from provisions of the act and that this period appears adequate. An additional 14 weeks' seasonal exemption was recently granted by Administrator Fleming.

F. D. R. Helps Marines 'Get' Conyers Man

After Much Correspondence Jesse Cowan Is Given His Chance.

The Marines have arrived. The situation is well in hand. And 27-year-old Jesse Terrell Cowan, of Conyers, is grateful to Uncle Sam.

The bewhiskered gentleman went to a lot of trouble to get this young man from Georgia who wanted to join the Marines. After a great deal of correspondence the two finally got together.

It was early in July that Cowan decided he wanted to get in the Marines or some form of military service. Country boy that he is, he didn't know anything to do but write to the President. He figured that was the democratic way.

Writes Roosevelt. So he sat down and wrote President Roosevelt a letter. It ran something like this:

"Dear Mr. President: I have been in your Civilian Conservation Corps. I liked it pretty well there. Now I want to get back in your CCC camps or in the Marines. I want to find a stationary place somewhere with the government."

"Mr. President, I am not satisfied on the outside world. I want to be with a bunch of fellows like you have in the CCC camps and your Marine Corps. Mr. President, I want to be prepared so that if something happened I wouldn't have to be trained. I would prefer the Marines."

F. D. R. Improved. The President was impressed with the letter. It was immediately referred to headquarters of the United States Marine Corps in Washington.

The Marine Corps, anxious to get fresh, new recruits, wrote the young man's father, John Cowan, a letter and sent a copy to the recruiting office in Atlanta. As the letters rolled through Uncle Sam's post office, young Cowan got closer and closer to what he wanted. Finally, he got some literature explaining the setup of the Marines. He was overjoyed.

Happy Moment. But the final happy moment came when Sergeant Carl Naman, recruiting officer, and Sergeant John T. Pilcher, his assistant, went out to Conyers to get Cowan.

They brought him in and told him he would have to stand an examination. But Cowan isn't worried. He believes he can pass that examination. The hard part is over, he thinks, because Uncle Sam put him in contact with the proper authorities.

Again the Marines have the situation well in hand. Jesse Cowan, of Conyers, is probably one of the happiest citizens of that thriving little city.

'Malicious Lies' Are Charged to Talmadge Men

Nix Says Foes Spreading Rumors He Will Quit Governor's Race.

FOLKSTON, Ga., Aug. 6.—Abit Nix, candidate for Governor, charged today that "malicious lies" were being waged against him by forces of at least one of his opponents.

He said the "Talmadge crowd" had started two "vicious rumors" in the state—one that he might withdraw from the race, and the other that he favors consolidation of counties.

"The only time I'll be out of the race," he asserted, "is after I beat them September 11." He contended that the Talmadge group favored consolidation, and not him.

"They tell me that Talmadge is mad because I compared him to Hitler," Nix said. "He can't blame me. I didn't do it. He made himself like Hitler."

Last of 72 Cases Aired In $20,000,000 Fraud

BOSTON, Aug. 6.—(P)—The federal government cleared its "pending" books of defendants in a country-wide $20,000,000 lottery fraud today, thus writing finish to an investigation which was marked by a 100 per cent record of convictions. The name of the late Will Rogers was used by promoters without permission.

Federal Judge Francis J. W. Ford disposed of the cases of the last 16 of the 72 defendants, sentencing two to jail and imposing fines totaling $5,740. The actions brought to 16 the number given jail sentences and boosted to $41,175 the amount collected in fines. Convictions were obtained in all 72 cases.

Young Aliens Get Short-Cut To Citizenship

Status of Those Coming to U. S. Before 16th Birthday Clarified.

Foreigners who come to this country before their 16th birthday have been given a short-cut to citizenship, and the status of women born in Hawaii has been clarified by a recent act of congress, the clerk's office of United States district court reported yesterday.

Aliens who come here as youngsters and reside here continuously through their 21st birthdays may file a petition for naturalization without the preliminary step of filing a declaration of intention. The naturalization petition, however, must be filed within a year after their 21st birthday.

A woman born in Hawaii before June 14, 1900, shall be considered a citizen of the United States, attaches reported.

While applications for citizenship have slackened since the June-July rush, clerks still report a lively demand for application papers, and much confusion among aliens as to their exact status.

Last alien to apply for papers was John Varduniotis, a Greek in Egypt, whose last residence was in Aden, Arabia. His wife, whom he married in French Somaliland, is an Italian. Varduniotis landed in the United States in 1910.

Georgia Leads U.S. In Melon Acreage

LEESBURG, Fla., Aug. 6.—(P) Florida was second among the states in carlot shipments of watermelons this season, and was first in commercial watermelon acreage, a report by the Agricultural Marketing Service of the United States Department of Agriculture shows.

As of July 28, when Georgia's season "was practically ended," Florida had shipped 5,828 cars, Florida 4,913, and South Carolina 3,375.

In acreage, Georgia led the nation with 66,000 acres. Texas was second with 43,900, South Carolina third with 25,500, and Florida fourth with 23,500. California, the only other state besides Florida raising early watermelons, had 5,500 acres in this crop for 1940, and shipped 2,143 cars.

The report said Georgia plantings were 8 per cent heavier than last year, but 10 per cent lighter than the 10-year average from 1929-38. The first cars were shipped June 19, much later than usual, "but loadings became general throughout most of the state shortly thereafter."

Atlanta Women Voters Hear 5 Political Talks

500 Attend Democratic Club Jamboree To See Candidates.

By LUKE GREENE.

Atlanta women voters learned some of the issues of Georgia's political campaigns last night as candidates for five state and county offices participated in a speaking jamboree sponsored by the Georgia Woman's Democratic Club. Approximately 500 members of the club and invited guests sat through more than two hours of political speaking as the candidates and their representatives outlined the planks in their platforms and appealed for votes in the forthcoming September 11 primary.

Gubernatorial candidates were first on the program. Each was allowed 10 minutes in which to present the salient features of his campaign. Other speakers were allotted seven minutes.

Howell on Health.

Hugh Howell, first on the program, emphasized the plank in his platform which calls for adequate medical and nursing care for women in childbirth. He also appealed to the women voters by promising to put more women in responsible positions in state government if he is elected governor.

Paul Webb, representing Candidate Abit Nix, reviewed the principle issues on which Nix is basing his campaign and declared: "We know the character of Mr. Nix is strong enough to fulfill every pledge he makes to the people of Georgia." He drew cheers from the crowd when he asserted there would be no bayonet rule in Georgia if Nix is successful on election day.

Keeps Coat On.

Following his usual custom, Eugene Talmadge made a triumphal entry just before he was scheduled to speak and received the cheers of the audience as he mounted the platform. For one of the few times in his speaking career he failed to remove his coat and display his red suspenders.

He denied that he had ever made the statement he did not care to carry the counties where the street cars run and asserted he was making a special bid for the votes of the more populous counties.

"Free School Teachers."

He declared that the present administration had furnished Georgia with the first free school teachers in many years, and added he was going to remedy this situation.

Other scheduled speakers, some of whom were absent, included candidates for secretary of state, state treasurer, solicitor general of Fulton county and commissioner of agriculture.

The meeting began with music and singing, with Miss Blanche Tanquary giving a vocal rendition of a new song by Miss Dannye Danford—"For Our 1940 President We Greet You Franklin Roosevelt."

Mrs. Fannie Mae Dabney, president of the woman's Democratic organization, was in charge of the program. Judge Ralph McClelland presided and introduced the speakers.

Tokyo Premier Seeks To Ease British Tension

'Wait and See' Policy Urged on War Minister at Cabinet Meeting.

TOKYO, (Wednesday), Aug. 7. (UP)—Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye and Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka are definitely opposed to any additional strain on British-Japanese relations at this time and are working quietly to ease the tension caused by the arrest of British residents of Japan and "counter-arrests" of Japanese residents of Britain, well-informed sources said today.

The premier and the foreign minister were said to have convinced War Minister Lieutenant General Eiichi Tojo at yesterday's cabinet meeting that no useful purpose would be served by a British-Japanese break now and that prudence dictates a "wait and see" policy until the European war situation becomes clearer.

Interned Mayor May Keep Office

MONTREAL, Aug. 6. (AP)—Legal observers expressed the opinion tonight the Camillien Houde, outspoken critic of conscription, would retain his office as mayor of Montreal and member of the Quebec legislature despite his internment under Canadian defense regulations.

His detention followed a statement last Friday in which, the police said, the mayor was quoted as opposing the national registration act and advising others to ignore it.

He is expected to continue to receive his mayor's salary of $10,000 a year until his term expires in December, in addition to interim pay of 22 cents a day for work done at the camp.

HOWELL GETS WELCOME—Mrs. Fannie Mae Dabney, president of the Georgia Woman's Democratic Club, greeted Hugh Howell, candidate for Governor, before candidates for five state and county offices spoke last night at a political jamboree sponsored by the woman's organization.

First Division Ready to Attack In War Games

Crack Army Unit Contrasts With Pink Faced Guardsmen.

FIRST DIVISION HEADQUARTERS NEAR WINTHROP, N. Y., Aug. 6.—(UP)—The streamlined First Division, show piece of the regular army, moved swiftly into positions along the St. Regis river today to become the spearhead of attacking enemy Black forces seeking to penetrate into the industrial heart of America.

The First, one of the new triangular divisions, is able to pass a given point with all its men and equipment, including 155 millimeter guns, in 90 minutes. Its fire power is the heaviest of any United States division and, when mechanized guns now "on order" arrive, will compare favorably with the German divisions which humbled the French.

In sharp contrast to the First Division were the First and 116th Infantry of the Virginia National Guard, which arrived at the railroad at Rennselaer Falls on a puffing, two-engine train this morning 52 minutes late. This criticism is not aimed at the fresh-faced boys who comprise most of these units, as the vast difference between them and the crack First Division is not their fault, but emphasizes the wide gulf between the average National Guard regiment and an effective modern fighting unit.

The Virginia boys carried, of course, the old Springfield rifle, their packs and little else. They slugged off down the road on "shanks mare" for want of other transport.

It is obvious that National Guard units need much training, and with equipment which most of them have not yet seen, before they can be considered more than cannon fodder against modern opponents. This is the first camp for about 40 per cent of them.

THREE GUARDSMEN KILLED IN ACCIDENT

CAMP BEAUREGARD, La., Aug. 6. (AP)—Three Texas National Guardsmen were killed in a highway accident in the Sabine war maneuver area west of here today, the first fatal accident to be reported in the assemblage of 70,000 regular army and National Guard troops for war games here next week.

They died when a water truck on which they were riding overturned near Leesville. More than a dozen soldiers were killed and many injured in traffic accidents which drew severe criticism of control officers during maneuvers here during May. Officers said truck and automobile drivers went at excessive speed, and with unnecessary risk of life.

Massachusetts Girl Vanishes Mysteriously

Patricia Cain, Post-Debutante, Subject of Wide Search.

MELROSE, Mass., Aug. 6. (UP)—Miss Patricia Cain, 21-year-old post-debutante daughter of the president of the Cain Mayonnaise Company, vanished mysteriously Sunday night and has not been seen since, police revealed today.

According to her father, John E. Cain, the girl left a Wakefield restaurant at 11:30 o'clock Sunday night to get her mother's knitting and that after going to the family car, walked over to a small sedan in which two men were sitting. She apparently talked to them for a short time, then entered the car and drove off with the men.

Cain could give no explanation of the girl's act and said that her departure could not have been prearranged because they had no intention of stopping at the restaurant until they reached it.

Miss Cain disappeared while en route home with her father and mother from a Vermont vacation. A graduate of Regis College, she made her debut in the 1934-35 season. She was a noted horsewoman and her mother thought she might have suffered an attack of amnesia as result of being thrown two years ago.

Detectives Capture Escaped Convict

Capture of the fifth escaped convict within the past 10 days was reported yesterday by Detectives M. M. Coppenger and Leo Nahlik.

The latest capture was listed as Bobby Ray, 39, alias Jack Sullivan, a former prize fighter. Nahlik and Coppenger said he escaped several days ago from the Forsyth county camp, where he was serving time on an automobile theft charge.

Prior to his Forsyth county term, he escaped from the DeKalb county camp where he was under a robbery sentence, the two detectives said.

Destroyer Launched At Charleston Today

CHARLESTON, S. C., Aug. 6. (UP)—Plans were complete tonight for the launching of the destroyer, U. S. S. Grayson, tomorrow at the Charleston navy yard.

The Grayson, built under the latest naval architectural plans, was named after the late Rear Admiral Cary Travers Grayson, of the Medical Corps, United States Navy. The vessel will be sponsored by his widow, Mrs. George L. Harrison, of New York.

The Grayson has a displacement of 1,630 tons and will be armed with five-inch guns.

TALMADGE WHISPERS SECRET—Eugene Talmadge, candidate for governor, leaned over to chat with State Senator Susie T. Moore, of Tifton, last night just before he addressed the Georgia Woman's Democratic Club at a downtown hotel. Other candidates for office also spoke.

$10,000 CASKET.

CHICAGO, Aug. 6. (AP)—The body of Mike Carozzo, an immigrant who ultimately controlled 25 Chicago labor unions, was borne to a cemetery today in a big bronze casket that cost $10,000.

The final rites were conducted in a west side funeral parlor.

Jaycees Are in Favor Of Compulsory Training

MACON, Ga., Aug. 6. (AP)—Directors of the Georgia Junior Chamber of Commerce are in favor of the immediate organization of the nation's resources and compulsory military training.

Meeting yesterday, the group passed a resolution declaring "the most important problem of the day is the immediate establishment of an adequate defense."

In addition to the organization of resources and compulsory military training, they advocated training of individuals in industries essential to the national defense and the elimination of excessive profits to businesses engaged in defense production.

Miss Redmond And Mr. Wood Wed Aug. 24

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 6.—Of widespread interest throughout Alabama and the south is the engagement announced recently of Miss Sarah Louise Redmond to Greenville D. Wood Jr., of Atlanta, by the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul A. Redmond, of this city, formerly of Rome.

Miss Redmond attended Ward-Belmont Junior College in Nashville, Tenn., and received her B. S. degree this June from the University of Alabama, where she was a member of Chi Omega sorority. Her sisters are Mrs. W. M. Greenwood, Misses Mildred and Betty Redmond, of Birmingham, and Mrs. Jackson M. Barlow, of Athens, Ga. Her only brother is Paul A. Redmond Jr., of Clanton, Ala.

The groom-to-be is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Greenville D. Wood, of Floyd, Va. For the past few years he has made his home in Atlanta, having attended Emory University, where he was a member of the Sigma Pi social fraternity. He is now connected with the Texas Oil Company. His sisters are Miss Sue Wood, of Floyd, Va., and Mrs. E. B. Agnor, of Atlanta, and his brothers are Dr. Hugh Wood and John Wood, both of Atlanta.

The marriage of the couple will be a social event of August 24 at the home of the bride-elect's parents here, after which the couple will reside in Atlanta.

Miss Burke Fetes Miss Faye Lamb.

First of the series of social affairs planned in honor of Miss Faye Lamb, whose marriage to Charles Montgomery will be an important event of September 7, will be the miscellaneous shower at which Miss Miriam Burke will entertain this evening at her home in Hapeville.

Invited are Misses Bessie Swicegood, Ruth Hill, Lucille Camp, May Swords, Mesdames Arnold Vickery, Bill Rivers, Earl Colley, J. R. Couey, John Milledge Jr. and Katherine Stansell. Other affairs planned in compliment to the lovely bride-elect will be announced later.

Miss Louise Connell Feted at Affairs.

Honoring a popular bride-elect of September, Miss Louise Connell, was the lingerie shower and bridge tea at which Miss Anne Wallace was hostess yesterday at her home on Cherokee road.

Guests were Mesdames Fred Connell, mother of the honor guest, and Gladys Dunn, Joel Knight, and Misses Melba Connell, Grace Fitzgerald, Anne Peake, Agnes Silva, Betty and Novena Harrison, Marcene Carey, Alice Cocke and Valerie Varmon.

Today Miss Connell will again be complimented at the linen shower and bridge party at which Miss Anne Peake will entertain at her home on Morningside drive.

Mrs. T. T. Peake will assist her daughter in entertaining. Invited are Mesdames Fred Connell and Joel Knight, Misses Anne Wallace, Marcene Carey, Miriam Rudesal, Marion Barber, Mary Luetje, Ann Suttles, Margaret Macon, Helen Groover and Aline Cocke.

Woodmen Circle To Honor Guests.

Maple Grove No. 86, Supreme Forest Woodmen Circle, meets Thursday evening in their clubrooms at 160 Central avenue.

Honor guests will be Mrs. Clara B. Cassidy, national director and state manager of Georgia, and William and Lanier Waller, from Sherman, Texas, who live at the Woodmen Circle home for aged members and orphan children. The Waller boys will arrive Tuesday to visit their sister, Mrs. Evelyn Haynes. The entertainment committee, Miss Darline Moon, chairman, and Mrs. Jeanette Wilkes, will have charge of the program. The Dora Alexander Talley Guards will exemplify special drill work.

Past Patrons' Club To Exemplify Degree.

The Past Patrons' Club of Fulton and DeKalb counties, O. E. S., will exemplify the degree work, Georgia Chapter No. 127 O. E. S., Thursday evening at 8 o'clock at Ogilthorpe Masonic lodge, corner Georgia avenue and Pryor streets.

The following officers will serve: Frank Morrison, worthy matron; Mrs. Ethel Monroe, worthy patron; Dr. A. P. Zeigler, associate matron; Mrs. Gladys W. White, secretary; T. C. Clements, treasurer; Harry Garrett, conductor; J. P. Beville, associate conductor; Ed Kinney, chaplain; E. C. Crawford, marshal; E. B. Lester, organist; Carl St. John, Ada; W. B. Gardner, Ruth; Harry Strickland, Esther; A. C. Lindstedt, Martha; H. A. Bailey, Electa; J. H. Monroe, warder; Mrs. W. P. Burnett, sentinel.

Cowan—McKinziey.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Cowan, of Covington, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Rosa Mae Cowan, of Atlanta, formerly of Covington, to Thomas Watson McKinziey, of Atlanta, formerly of Flowery Branch, on July 27.

Picnic Planned.

Members of the Inman Park Woman's Club desiring to participate in the picnic to be held at North Fulton park, are requested to meet at Moreland Avenue school at 10 o'clock today. Motorcade will leave promptly at 10:30 o'clock.

Silver Cloud Council.

Silver Cloud Council No. 1, degree of Pocahontas, auxiliary of Improved Order of Red Men, will hold public installation of officers this evening at 8 o'clock at the hall, 160 Central avenue. There will also be a cake walk.

Orson Welles Severely Criticizes Himself

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 6.—Picture of a man talking to himself—Orson Welles! The movie for which Hollywood has waited breathlessly for 12 months has actually started! After two false starts, the chosen vehicle is "Citizen Kane," which Orson describes as "a drama." As you must know by this time, wonder-boy Welles is directing, producing, writing as well as acting the leading role in his production. I am invited to his studio for a peep at the master in action. Look and listen over my shoulder.

Orson, in the black and white splendor of full evening clothes, (He is minus his beard) is kissing and serving eggs to his first wife—Ruth Warrick. He has been carrying the eggs and kissing Ruth since 11 a. m. It is now 3 p. m. "Here I come," says Welles the director to Welles the actor. He goes through the routine, but is not satisfied. "It's no good," says Director Welles to Actor Welles. More rehearsals with Ruth. "All right, let's do it again. No, wait a minute, I need a little more rehearsal," says Director Welles; then, before metamorphosing into the actor, pauses, shouts, "Action—and quiet please!"

This goes on—take after take—during the half hour I am allowed on the set. Welles the actor is sandwiched between the "action" and "cut" of Welles the director, the latter severely criticizing the efforts of the former. I'd like to know what goes on in the mind of Welles. Is Producer Welles wondering, "How much is this costing?"—with Director Welles saying to Writer Welles, "That's a bad line of dialogue—change it." And Writer Welles replying, "Go jump in a lake. What do you expect for $150,000?"

Before we both get too dizzy—here in brief is the story of "Citizen Kane." The picture opens with the death of Orson at the age of 70. We flash back to Orson as a young man of 11. Even at that age he has cornered all the silver spoons in the market. He is rich, well-born, and what have you. What to do with the rest of his life? He becomes a glorified robber baron, owns newspapers and gold mines. He marries twice. The first wife is the above-mentioned Ruth, but he neglects her for business. Then he marries his lady-love—Dorothy Comingore. But don't be fooled by the name. She's really Linda Winters and has quite a story to tell.

Dorothy was born in Los Angeles. She has red hair and green eyes. She is 22 years old. She changed her name to Linda (of which there are seven now in Hollywood) when Columbia signed her to a stock contract. "But all I did was to pose in swimming suits," she tells me. "They wouldn't let me act. I appeared in two pictures—walking up some stairs in one and down in another." Which is what she might still be doing if she hadn't met Orson at a cocktail party last summer. He liked her, called for a date. She took him to a preview. He remembered her when casting "Citizen Kane." She will age up to 50 in the film.

Orson tells me he has received half of the $150,000 for his four-year chore. And spent it. He gets another $37,500 at the end of his first two weeks of shooting. And the rest when the picture is "canned." There is a 60-day shooting schedule for "Citizen Kane." (I think it will be much longer). But at the moment it bears a Thanksgiving release tag. (Did I say Thanksgiving?)

Orson has not yet abandoned his intention of filming "Smiler With a Knife." He shelved it temporarily after difficulties in hiring a leading lady. He wanted Carole Lombard, but Carole refused the risk on these grounds: "If the picture flops, it will hurt my reputation. If it is a success, you will get all the credit." And he will—if the picture is good.

Today's Charm Tip

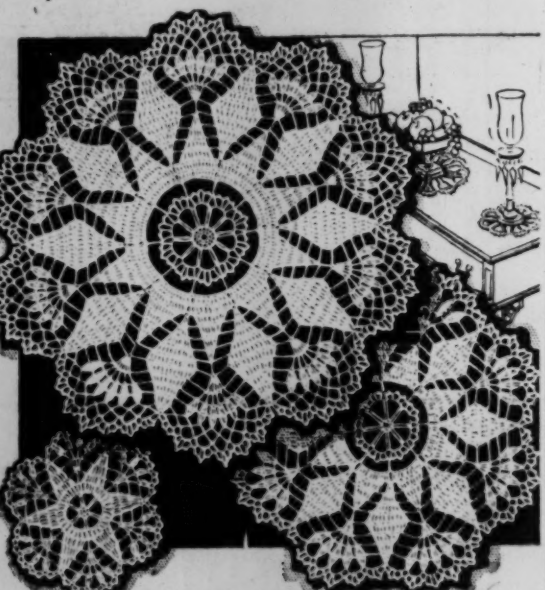

'Tis just as unforgivable to be a late slayer as it is to yawn in a person's face. So many times an otherwise charming evening is spoiled by a guest or a hostess guilty of such inconsideration.

Deodorant Has Dainty Fragrance

By Lillian Mae.

Cleanliness is truly next to godliness, but cleanliness isn't sufficient within itself to assure daintiness, for without proper precaution to prevent body odors, even a clean skin isn't always proof. And there is no worse offender than an unpleasant, perspiration odor.

This applies not only to your person, but to clothes as well. Unless a deodorant is used it is practically impossible to keep blouses, dresses, and even coats, odorless. And few of us can afford to have our clothes dry cleaned after each wearing. Of course the market is flooded with deodorants—powders, creams, liquids, etc.—and most of them are meritorious. But while one type appeals to me, another might suit you better. Therefore, I am bringing to your attention different types which I have found efficacious, and then you may decide for yourself which you like best.

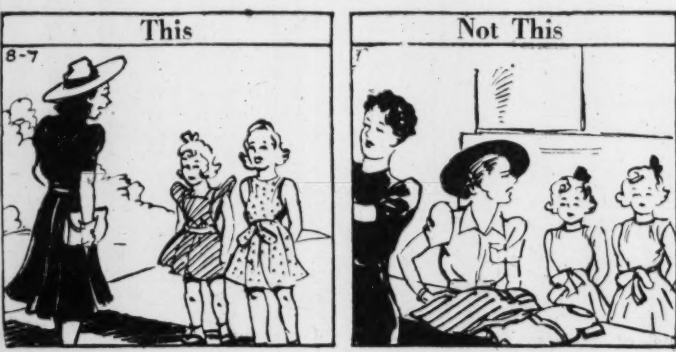

I have for you today one which appeals particularly to me for several reasons. First, it is a liquid, which may be applied at any time—immediately after shaving or using a depilatory, even. It will NOT injure your finest fabrics. Used on skin freshly bathed, it neutralizes perspiration odors and acts as a perfume, imparting a lovely lily-like fragrance—neither too sweet nor too strong, but one which gives to any age or type of person just that light, lingering perfume that makes her welcome company in any assembly, instead of the faint, sickening perspiration odor which might otherwise pervade.

It's easy to use. Simply sprinkle a few drops from the attractive cologne-type bottle onto fingers or into the palm of your hand and apply. It dries quickly and sets at ease your mind with regard to an effective toilet. If you prefer, you may have it in cream form, and there is a talcum in matching fragrance.

Phone me for the name of this perfume deodorant and use it as a two-in-one during this warm weather—deodorant and perfume. Write me if you do not live in Atlanta, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

POINTS FOR PARENTS

By Edyth Thomas Wallace.

Friend: "You sisters don't dress alike any more."
Alice: "We used to like to dress alike, but we don't now."

Alice: "I don't want a dress just like sister's."
Mother: "That's all nonsense. You always have dressed alike."

If parents are just, they must have a sounder reason for decisions than "we always have done thus and so."

Food Quiz May Help You With Your Weight Problems

By Ida Jean Kain

Quizzes seem to be a popular form of diversion—and most people pride themselves on their knowledge of food. So here is an easy way to find out just what you know about reducing! And it may give you a clue to your weight problems.

Run through the list of questions and check your replies, then read the answers given below.

1. Which is more fattening, sugar or butter?
2. Which uses the most calories, dishwashing, ironing, or typing?
3. Are lemons reducing?
4. Are alcohol calories stored as fat?
5. Is fat sometimes inherited?
6. Do smart housewives add soda to vegetables to preserve their fresh, green color?
7. Are there more fat men, or more fat women?
8. On the average, when is the most weight gained—between the ages of 25 and 30; 30 and 40, 40 and 50?
9. Which is more fattening, a glass of grapejuice or a glass of whole milk?

All right, here are the answers. See how you made out.

1. Butter is more than twice as fattening as sugar. One ounce of butter contains two and one-fourth times as many calories as one ounce of sugar.
2. Maybe this one fooled you! They all use the same number of calories—85 calories per pound per hour.
3. No. Neither lemons nor any other food is reducing.
4. Alcohol calories cannot be turned into fat. But while you are burning the alcohol for energy, food calories are spared and stored as fat. If you didn't eat, you wouldn't gain—but you would develop a dietary deficiency, for alcohol contains none of the repair materials needed by the body.
5. No. One may inherit a tendency to put on weight easily but fat itself is not inherited. Only excess food can cause excess weight.
6. No! The best housewives know that the addition of soda causes the rapid deterioration of the vitamins.
7. Statistics prove that fat women are in the majority.
8. Statistics also reveal that the average weight gain is greatest between the ages of 30 and 40.
9. One eight-ounce glass of grapejuice contains the same number of calories as an eight-ounce glass of whole milk—160 calories.

Every Adult Has Own Problems

Visit Doctor Early, Retain Good Health

By Dr. William Brady.

It is astonishing how many people who purport to be of fair intelligence suffer from the manifold effects of piles (hemorrhoids) yet either do not suspect the nature of the trouble or, if they do know they have piles, drift along from one "attack" to another, from poor health to worse, without seeking proper treatment.

Internal piles, the presence of which can be determined only by visual examination through the speculum—and don't let any trick doctor pretend he can tell whether you have piles without such examination—often give rise to reflex disturbances that lead to egregious errors in diagnosis and a great deal of ineffective treatment. Among the conditions which may be wholly due to neglected internal hemorrhoids are these, from actual clinical records: "Lumbago," "sciatica," "bladder trouble," "prostatic obstruction," "peptic ulcer," "colitis" and various pelvic complaints in men and women, as well as complaints of "indigestion."

A good many persons with painless internal piles develop advanced anemia from frequent occult or unnoticed bleeding and get into a depraved state of health before they even consult a capable physician. By capable physician I mean one who insists on a thorough examination before he undertakes to treat a patient, and of course such examination includes rectal examination by the aid of speculum which reveals the unsuspected lesion.

It is not clearly understood by the general public that an "attack of piles" means inflammation of the piles, and when the "attack" is over the piles remain as before—so that it is a matter of time and circumstance until the piles again become inflamed and pain and other symptoms return. Piles being essential varicose veins, dilated or enlarged veins, no local medicament and no systemic medicine can cure them. The only cure is obliteration of the varicose vein (as by the modern injection treatment) or excision of it (by the old-time clamp and cautery operation).

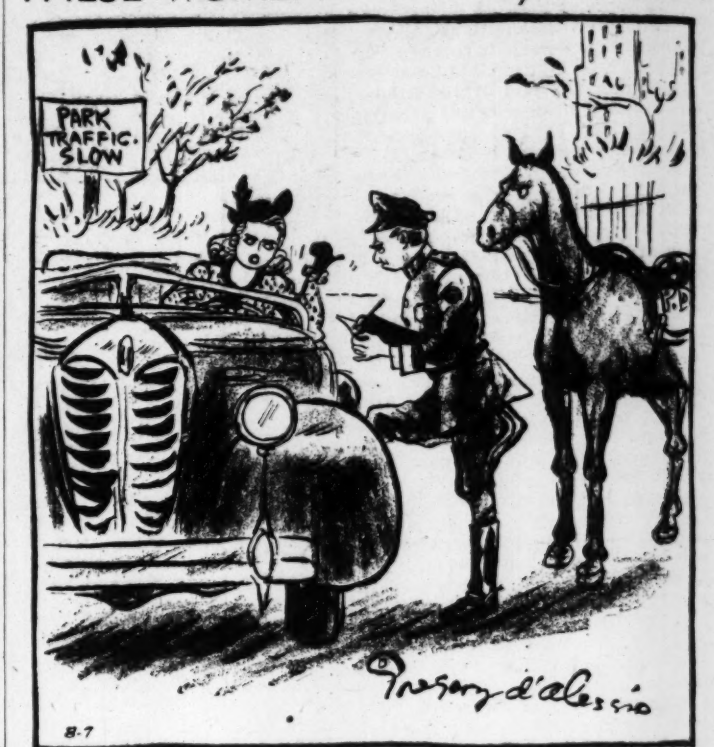

The injection treatment of piles in the hands of a physician skilled in the method is painless, readily administered in the doctor's office, does not detain the patient from regular work or activities, gives highly satisfactory results in practically all cases. It is, indeed, the method of choice today in all of the foremost medical centers. If your quack doctor doesn't approve of it or if he damns it with faint praise you may be sure that is because he is far behind the progress of his profession—and you may tell him so with my compliments.

The injection treatment is applicable only to internal piles. External piles are best cured by ligature under local anesthesia or, if thrombosed (if a blood clot has formed) by radical incision and removal of the clot.

About four-fifths of all cases of piles are internal piles, but when inflamed and swollen, internal piles may protrude and require replacing after each evacuation.

MY DAY: A Responsibility To the People

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

HYDE PARK.—I am very glad to find myself in agreement with General Hugh Johnson, whom I like personally very much, though I do not frequently have an opportunity to agree with his ideas. He has been writing in favor of the selective draft and in his column on Saturday says something which I believe is true:

"It is simply a question of whether or not we are going to get adequate defense against overseas attack and get it quick enough to keep war away from these shores. We won't get it if we don't get selective service and get it promptly."

With this I agree, but I should like to add something more which I believe every senator and congressman, as well as every public servant in the country, no matter whether he is Republican or Democrat, should be watching with the greatest care. We know that in the past some people have profited financially from war. It is one thing to draft young men to give their services to their country and another to draft such capital as may be lying idle for investment in ways which may be deemed necessary for defense and which may mean little or no return to the investor.

The obvious answer is that most capital is in the nature of a trusteeship. Those who have it to invest feel a responsibility to the people (you and me whom they represent in banks and companies) for the way in which they invest it. It is apparent that some people cannot afford to spare anything from small incomes. But the best minds in the country should be occupied at the present time with determining how it can be made equally certain that capital, wherever possible, is drafted for the use of the country in just the way that lives are drafted.

I am not an economist. I am not a public servant. I am a mother and a citizen in a democracy, however, and I think it should be clearly put before us exactly how this is being done today. In congress and in administrative circles this is a responsibility which the people are going to want to be sure is being considered and adequately safeguarded.

I had a grand ride this morning, but was grieved to find that the last storm blew down some of the most beautiful trees on a neighboring place. Somehow when a great tree comes crashing to the ground and lies there with its leaves withering, I feel as though some great and good force had finally been vanquished.

Some people are coming to lunch with me and a number are coming to see me this afternoon. My husband has kept this day entirely free because tomorrow he has a number of official engagements.

Tricky Looking Dance Steps Easily Learned at Home

Beets, Polish style, are recommended for vegetable variety.

Health-Giving Foods More Appetizing In Hot Weather If Served a New Way

By Sally Saver.

We greet summer vegetables with enthusiasm. But after they've been with us through many a scorching day our spirits droop and we eye them with indifference or something less. Then it is, that the meal planner must trot out some intriguing new way of serving these health-giving foods. The string beans which have been appearing in vegetable dishes flavored with salt or smoked bacon, must now appear au gratin, or perhaps in a salad. The lima beans which have been served in a cream sauce, may now appear with strips of crisp bacon atop.

Pickled beets may be replaced temporarily by beets, Polish style, made as follows:

Beets, Polish Style.
Small beets, cooked until tender and drained.
3 tablespoons margarine
1-2 tablespoons flour
3-4 cup water in which beets were cooked
3-4 teaspoon lemon juice
1-2 tablespoons sugar
3-8 teaspoon salt
1-4 teaspoon pepper
3 tablespoons sour cream
Melt margarine in saucepan, add flour and stir until smooth. Add remaining ingredients, bring to a boil and boil 1 minute. Pour over beets and serve at once.
Don't overlook the possibilities of eggplant. Broiled or sauteed eggplant slices are really delicious and give an air of sophistication to meat loaf, steak or chops. Make sauteed eggplant this way:

Sauteed Eggplant.
Peel a medium-sized eggplant. Cut, crosswise in 3-8-inch slices. Dip in slightly beaten egg, to which salt and pepper have been added. Saute slowly, for 3 or 4 minutes in a little hot fat, turning to brown on both sides. A little prepared mustard may be added to the egg mixture for interesting flavor. Serve hot. For broiling, these slices may be sprinkled with salt and pepper, dotted with butter and broiled slowly until tender.

When you haven't learned a step in ages you can feel so bewildered with a strange crowd doing new dances! Being an on-looker is no fun—at home or on vacation.

Don't get the idea, though, that you can't catch up quickly. There's the Lindy Hop, for instance, a gay young dance if there ever was one—and stacks of fun. By following easy diagrams, practicing a little, you'll soon be "Lindy-Hopping" with the best of them.

Try the Lindy Left Turn, first practicing alone. Then, with a partner start in the open position and—on Count 1—lift left knee and take short step back on ball of foot. 2—Lift right knee, step in place. 3—Step forward on left foot, knee straight, turning right to face partner in closed position. 4—Bend left knee. 5—Lift right knee, take short step back. 6—Close with left foot. 7—Step back on right foot, knee straight. 8—Bend right knee.

Dance the Lindy Hop to lively fox-trot music, counting four beats to a measure instead of two as in the fox-trot. And, instead of swinging the leg from the hip as in the fox-trot, in the Lindy Hop you lift the knees and take short steps on the balls of the feet.

And why not spruce up your whole repertoire of dances, learn new waltz as well as new Conga steps—make your crowd sit up and take notice?

You can easily if you practice with the instructions and diagrams in our 40-page booklet, "Social Dancing Self-Taught." Shows how to do a ravishing tango, a wicked rumba, an up-to-the-minute Conga, a romantic waltz and Westchester, a gay shag, fox-trot and Lindy-Hop. Has basic steps, variations. Gives pointers on posture; leading, following.

His Attitude Toward Them Is Important

By Caroline Chatfield.

Do you ever stop to realize that all the grown people you greet in your home, pass on the street, meet at the market or sit by in a movie, are wrestling with some sort of hard problem that cuts down their joy in life, breaks off their laughter and pierces their consciousness as a needle prick? No, we don't.

We look at the well-dressed, well-groomed man or woman and say "What it takes to meet life and master it, that person has it." We sit down at the dinner table with a prosperous family, note the good housekeeping, the evidences of easy camaraderie between husband and wife, the jocularity of the conversation in which all the children take part, the comfortable clannishness of the whole crowd and we say: Wonderful! They have everything and nothing to worry about.

We see a couple ride by in a luxurious motor car, chauffeur at the wheel, and we know that the life-plenty of ease, no problems except where to go, and what to do next for a good time. We look at the woman with the quiet eyes, the hands lying calmly in her lap and we are sure if she ever were worried, she's learned the secret of getting on top of her worries.

We note the young businesswoman tripping out of her office building to meet the boy friend. She's gay, stepping high and looking handsome because, as Kitty Foyle would say, she's happy. We look enviously at her and wish: Oh! if we could set back the clock to that age: nothing on our minds but love and laughter.

Think again, reader. They are all wrestlers on the mat with problems that vex. They are all fighting something which seems bigger than they. They win a round, lose a round, win a round, lose a round. Sometimes we catch them when they are feeling the exultation of victory, sometimes when they are writhing under the sting of defeat. They are just like us inside, however they may appear outside, having their laughter interrupted, their joy cut down, having their pleasant experiences punctured by the thought of some vexing problem they haven't been able to solve.

Tots' Bolero Style

By Lillian Mae.

The "pigtail crowd" likes bolero outfits as much as any grown-up. Here is an especially captivating style by Lillian Mae, Pattern 4515. The skirt is double-paneled front and back, with the front waist seam "upped" in a novel shape. There's a prim little collar; a tie, buttons and braid all make nice trim. Make the dress alone in a vivid print. Then save your pattern and when days begin to shorten, stitch up a second style, adding the pert bolero, perhaps in wool challis. You might cut the bolero and skirt from remnants of your own dressmaking, and have the bodice in a sprightly contrast!

Pattern 4515 is available in children's sizes 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10. Size 6 skirt and bolero takes 1 3/4 yards 38-inch fabric; blouse, 3-4 yard contrast.

Send 15 cents in coins for this Lillian Mae pattern. Do not send stamps. Write plainly size, name, address and style number.

Be "best-dress woman in town . . . on a budget plan . . . via the Lillian Mae Book of Patterns." This wonderful magazine contains smart clothes for every member of the family, from smallest "small fry" to over-fifty. And even though you've never taken a stitch before, the crystal-clear sewing instructions that accompany each simple pattern make home-dressmaking easy fun. Woman's Quiz

Q. How may I remove mildew from leather?
A. Make a thick paste of bicarbonate of soda, rub it into the leather, and stand in the sun for a day. Leather articles may be improved by an occasional rubbing with sulphated cod oil. Very little liquid should be used and the excess wiped off.

Merry Family Party Gathers At Atlantan's Beach Home

THE PRESENCE here overnight of Mrs. James M. Cox, of Dayton, Ohio, and those newlyweds, Louis and Ann Cox Johnson, was fairly tantalizing to their Atlanta friends. The trio motored here from Sea Island on Monday, but the lure of the sands and the sea must have been too great, for they hurried right back yesterday.

Mrs. Cox is visiting Mrs. Edwin Johnson at her lovely beach home at the resort, and of course Ann and Louis have been with Mrs. Johnson since they returned from an eastern honeymoon in June. So it has been a very merry family party at Casa De Encanto.

An additional guest there is Sam Lester, of Montezuma, who is visiting Louis and Ann. He was one of the two best men in their wedding, which was brilliantly solemnized at an afternoon ceremony in Dayton, you remember.

Captain and Mrs. John Smith gave a buffet supper last Saturday evening at their charming Sea Island home with Mrs. Cox, Ann and Louis as honor guests. Completing the party were Mr. and Mrs. Rufus King, Mr. and Mrs. DeWitt King, of Atlanta, and their weekend guests, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Miller, of Nashville, Tenn.; Mr. and Mrs. Colquitt Carter, Mr. and Mrs. Bonneau Ansley, Mr. and Mrs. Neal Baird, all of Atlanta; Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Compton, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred W. Jones, of Sea Island; Sam Lester, of Montezuma, and Dick Courts, of Atlanta, who spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Jones. After supper the party went to the cloister, where they danced to Theodore's continental music in the palm patio.

A perfect whirl of parties will greet Ann and Louis when they return to Atlanta for residence in the early fall. They have taken an apartment in the Biltmore, according to rumor, and society eagerly awaits their arrival.

Which reminds Sally Forth to tell you to look in your latest issue of "Town and Country," under the Social Calendar, to see a charming likeness of Ann and Louis, pictured as they sampled the bubbling champagne immediately after their marriage. Among other Atlanta newsworthy on the same page are Grant and Louisa Robert LeRoux, photographed with Louisa's father, "Chip" Robert, at the Driving Club reception immediately following their marriage.

GOINGS, COMINGS and whereabouts of Atlantans and Georgians are of particular interest these torrid summer days, and Virginia Beach rings the bell for being one of the most popular of southern resorts. Atlantans noted at the Cavalier hotel are Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Sewell, Dr. and Mrs. William A. Garrett, Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Lowe, Mr. and Mrs. George Sheffield, John W. Vann, Sam D. Morris, C. J. Tullis Jr. and Dr. Roy Mitchell.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl L. Speer and Robert C. Speer, of Albany, recently spent several days at this Virginia resort.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Sams Jr. honeymooned at the hotel before going to their new home in Athens. The bride is the former Agnes Jarnagin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milton P. Jarnagin, of Athens.

The newly-wedded Mr. and Mrs. Harry G. Myers, who will reside in Woodside, Long Island, N. Y., made the Cavalier headquarters while on their wedding journey. The bride will be recalled as the former Sarah Ann Adams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bowling Adams, of Norcross, near Atlanta.

A. K. Wyatt and E. H. Wyatt Jr. were recent guests, as were Guy Dodd, of Williamson, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Marion, of Rome; Homer G. Ray Jr., of Moultrie, and C. W. Wright, of Savannah.

WHEN THE Tennessee Valley celebration is formally opened in Chattanooga on the evening of August 30, heralding the festive occasion will be the eighth annual Cotton Ball, which will assemble prominent feminine representatives from all over the south. Gracing the important event to be held at Memorial auditorium will be lovely Selma Wight, who has been chosen a "Cotton Belle."

Selma, who was secretary of the 1939-40 Debutante Club, will be crowned in an ante-bellum model of yellow dotted swiss, as will the other prominent belles, among whom Medora Fitten has also been designated.

Among the many other affairs planned in conjunction with the celebration to which the charming Selma will be accompanied by her parents, the Ward Wights, will be the Lady of the Lake Ball on August 31, and the Happy Valley Horse Show on the following day.

Out for a morning stroll on the beach are, left to right, Stuart Broeman Jr., Mrs. John L. Conner and the latter's son, Frank Conner, a trio of popular Atlantans who are spending some time at Daytona Beach, Fla. Mrs. Conner has taken a cottage on North Atlantic for six weeks, during which time Frank has as his guest his close friend, Stuart. When the two boys are not swimming or fishing or sunning themselves on the beach, they are skimming the water in Frank's speedboat which he keeps tied up in the Halifax river. Mr. Conner will join his family next week for a stay at the beach.

Miss Atkinson Is Betrothed

ALTADENA, Cal., Aug. 6.—Dr. and Mrs. Spencer Roane Atkinson, of Altadena, Cal., formally announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Anne Catherine Atkinson, to Robert Roy Hoffman Jr., of Mexico City. The marriage takes place in the early autumn, and Mr. Hoffman and his bride will reside in Mexico City.

The lovely and attractive bride-elect attended Polytechnic and Westridge schools and graduated from Washington Seminary in Atlanta, Ga. Later she attended the University of California at Los Angeles, where she was a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority. She is the niece of Judge Samuel C. Atkinson, of Atlanta.

Mr. Hoffman, the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Hoffman, of Mexico City, formerly of Texas, is an alumnus of the University of Texas, where he was affiliated with Kappa Alpha and Delta Sigma Pi, business fraternity.

Miss Jean Turner, Mr. Elliott Reveal Wedding Personnel

The First Baptist church will form the setting on the evening of September 14 for the marriage of Miss Jean Turner and Dick Elliott, the brilliant ceremony to be performed at 7:30 o'clock by Dr. Ellis A. Fuller in the presence of an assemblage of friends and relatives of the prominent couple.

George Hamrick, organist, will present a musical program. A. E. Turner will give his daughter in marriage, Miss Turner has selected her mother, Mrs. Turner, as her matron of honor and her bridesmaids will include Misses Anne Brantley, Dorothy Pharr, Martha Adkins, Cornelia Gaines, Margaret Turner, cousin of the bride-elect, and Jane Hawkins, of Marietta, another cousin of the lovely bride-to-be.

The usher-groomsman will be Hugh Smith, William D. Evans Jr., Elliott Herrington, William C. Lee, John R. Zachary, W. V. DeLoach and William E. Zachary. Dr. Walter B. Elliott Jr. will be best man for his brother.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Turner, parents of the bride-elect, will entertain at a reception for the bridal personnel and out-of-town guests.

Prior to her marriage Miss Turner will be central figure at a series of social affairs among which is the bathroom shower at which a group of her business associates will entertain tomorrow. The affair will be held at the home of Miss Mary Louise McIntosh, on Rumson road. On Saturday the attractive bride-to-be will be honor guest at the luncheon and miscellaneous shower at which the members of the primary department of the First Baptist church will entertain at the Citizens & Southern Bank tearoom.

On August 17 Miss Turner will share honors with a trio of popular brides-elect, Misses Virginia Zachry, Margaret Smith and Esther Byrnes, at the waffle breakfast at which Mrs. Howard P. Lovelless will be hostess. The affair will be held at the home of the hostess' mother, Mrs. A. E.

Miss Forrester has chosen her sister, Mrs. Cecil H. Dunn, as her matron of honor, and Miss Medora Fitten will act as her maid of honor. Other attendants will be Misses Barbara Greene, Miss Mary Price, Miss Virginia Fain and Mrs. Murphy Nesbitt, sister of the groom-elect.

Fred W. Forrester will give his sister in marriage and Dr. Robert Frank McCormack will be his brother's best man.

Groomsman include Joseph McC. Fambrough, W. Emory Williams, J. Randolph Timmerman, George W. Cornell, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Dr. Edwin L. Lipe, Kannapolis, N. C. Ushers include Ernest Trotti, Dr. Jeff Richardson, Cecil H. Dunn, Brunswick, Ga.; Stanley W. Hall, R. Quinton Lowe, Birmingham, Ala.

Among parties planned is the dinner party to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Trotti on August 31. Preceding the wedding rehearsal on September 6, Miss Medora Fitten and Miss Barbara Greene entertain at a cocktail party.

Among others who will entertain for the couple are Mrs. Mark Allen Palmour Jr., who entertains at her home on Kingsboro road at a soft drink party. Mrs. Pancher Moore will entertain at a luncheon at the Frances Virginia tea room, honoring the members of the bridal party.

Miss Virginia Fain will entertain at a dinner party at the Druid Hills Golf Club, honoring the bridal party, and Mrs. Avery Austin and Miss Isobel Hamilton will honor Miss Forrester at a linen shower at the Druid Hills Golf Club.

Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Pierce, sister and brother of the bride, will entertain at the rehearsal party for the couple. Mr. and Mrs. Joe Fambrough and Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Timmerman will be co-hosts at a breakfast honoring the couple. Other parties will be announced later.

FROM WAR ZONE—Radioman First Class W. J. Crabbe arrived in Atlanta yesterday after four years with an American destroyer squadron in the Mediterranean, bringing with him his French wife, Renee, and their small son, Gilbert. War to "Zheelbars" as his mother calls him, is a lot of fun. It makes him travel around a lot, from Villefranche, France, where he was born, to Lisbon, Portugal, and now to the U. S. A. Where he goes next depends on what plans Uncle Sam has for his Pop. Pop hopes it's shore duty, but Gilbert likes to travel.

Legion To Sponsor State Boys' Camp

Georgia Legionnaires announced yesterday that they would sponsor a summer camp for boys, with each Legion post in the state permitted to send a boy who otherwise would not have an opportunity to attend a camp.

Murt J. Kelly, chairman of the Legion's camp committee, said Camp Wahega, located in the north Georgia mountains about 11 miles from Dahlonega, had been rented from August 18 to September 1. Varied recreational facilities are available and adequate supervision of each camper is assured, he added.

The recreational division of the WPA has agreed to furnish much of the personnel, Kelly said, and Legionnaires and their sons will serve as counselors.

Sailor Doesn't Believe Nazis Can Win War

Bill Crabbe, Fresh From Foreign Duty, Bets on British Navy.

By HAROLD MARTIN.

Bill Crabbe is a sailor, so he thinks like a sailor—and sailors don't think that as long as there is an English navy and an English channel the Germans will ever conquer the British Isles.

They may bomb London flat, and pockmark the green English countryside with bomb craters from the channel coast to the Scottish border. And they may drop a few parachute troops. But as for landing men—William the Norman was the last to do that and he did it before England had a navy.

So thinks First Class Radio Operator William J. Crabbe, of Uncle Sam's navy, four years on duty in the Mediterranean and home on furlough at 883 Cherokee avenue, S. E., with his French wife, Renee, and their little boy, Gilbert, whom his mama calls "Zheel-bare."

Thirty-two years old and 18 of those in the navy, Crabbe, who is staying with his brother, Carl R. Crabbe, has plenty of ideas about what is going to happen.

One is that if the English ever get a good crack at the Italians in the Mediterranean, "them Limeys are going to chase them Dagoes plumb up into the Alps." The Italian people, whom he had a chance to observe at first hand when his ship put into their ports before the war, didn't have enough to eat then, and in another six months, he thinks, they won't even have spaghetti.

"And even if they were fat and well fed they couldn't lick the English on the water," he declared.

Crabbe came home yesterday from New York where his ship, the Trenton, deposited him recently when it came back bringing the royal family of Luxembourg. He went over with an American squadron during the Spanish war to base at Villefranche, a French port, and bring American refugees out of Spain. When the big war broke out the American squadron moved over to Lisbon, Portugal, where it is now based. It still is keeping a fatherly eye on American nationals.

Crabbe shares all American sailors' delight at the fact America is building a two-ocean navy, and feels that as soon as we get it in operation we will be safe over here as long as it rides the seas.

Miss Rebecca Cofer Marries William B. Willingham III

Engaging the cordial and sincere interest of a host of friends throughout the state is the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. Percy O'Neal Cofer, of Greensboro, Ga., of the marriage of their daughter, Miss Rebecca Cofer, to William Baynard Willingham III. The ceremony was quietly solemnized last Friday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Roy Collins, in Marietta, with the Rev. H. M. Strozier officiating.

The bride is one of a trio of lovely daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Cofer, her father being a prominent planter and influential citizen of Greensboro. Her mother is the former Miss Eulalie Amos, of Greensboro. She is the sister of Mrs. Theima Sampler, of Atlanta; Miss Elizabeth Cofer, of Greensboro, and Percy Abbott Cofer, of Atlanta.

Mrs. Willingham received her elementary and high school education in Greensboro and later graduated from the Draught School of Commerce in Atlanta. She is now connected with the education department of the Works Projects Administration. A beautiful young girl of the Spanish blond type, she possesses a winsome charm and friendly manner that have endeared her to a wide circle of friends since coming to Atlanta for residence.

Mr. Willingham is the elder son of Mr. and Mrs. William Baynard Willingham Jr. and a scion of one of the state's most prominent and representative families. He is the grandson of Mrs. Walker Dunson and the late Mr. Dunson and of Mrs. William B. Willingham Sr. and the late Mr. Willingham, all of whom are ranked among Atlanta's leading citizens. Her mother was before her marriage Miss Edith Dunson, a popular Atlanta belle, and he is the brother of Miss Edith Randall Willingham and Walker Dunson Willingham.

The bridegroom is associated in business with his father, William B. Willingham Jr., who is president of the Willingham-Tift Lumber Company. He and his bride are at home with the groom's parents at 230 Westminster Drive in Ansley Park until September 1.

Strength First In Selection of City Laborers

(Severe Physical Tests Are Set for Aspirants to Jobs.)

Laborers for the city of Atlanta, many of whom in the past have been hired for their political strength and influence, in the future are going to be hired for their physical strength and endurance.

This was announced yesterday by Carl Sutherland, city personnel director, as plans for a unique series of tests for laborers were being laid by the personnel department.

Some 200 men who want jobs as park workers, tree trimmers, stokers' helpers and straight laborers will be examined not for their ability to answer academic questions, but for their physical prowess and agility.

Out to the athletic field at Tech high school they will go August 20—accompanied by a crew of medical and health experts.

There the aspirants of laborers' jobs will be called upon to chin the bar, roll wheelbarrows filled with sand, run around the field, lift weights, and to do other strength-testing stunts. Then the doctors will examine the men to see if they can take the card work which will be expected of them if they get jobs with the city.

This method of examining the physique of laborers has been tried successfully in New York and other large cities, Sutherland said.

In fact, it was recalled, one applicant for a garbage collector's job in New York recently made such high marks in this type of physical examination that he received several proposals of marriage from women who seemed to want strong, well-set up garbage collectors for husbands.

State To Probe Traffic Lights In Small Towns

Conditions Aggravated by Improperly Placed Signals, Official Says.

Pointing out that traffic lights in small towns sometimes aggravate traffic conditions, M. C. Bishop, director of the division of traffic and safety of the State Highway Department, yesterday announced that in the future all requests for the installation of such signals on state routes will be handled in a sound engineering manner.

Present signals will be investigated and if it is found that they are not serving the best interests of traffic movement and safety, recommendations will be made for their removal, Bishop added.

"Investigation reveals a common belief in the municipalities that the traffic signal is a cure-all for all kinds of traffic ills," he said.

"A traffic signal installed in a location which does not warrant this type of regulation will often aggravate conditions in the community itself, as well as delay other traffic unnecessarily."

Ice in Church Furnace Sends Mercury Tumbling

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 6.—(P)—A Baptist congregation jammed two tons of ice into the church furnace to cool off.

It cost $7 but lowered the temperature 11 degrees. Novus Reed, the choirmaster, had the idea.

A six-foot fan in the fire chamber blows heat during the winter through two ducts opening in the auditorium. All the congregation did was to unload the ice in the furnace room and start the fan spinning.

Advocate of Blue Laws Favors Old-Time Saloon

BALTIMORE, Aug. 6.—(P)—Mrs. Alice Hession—who has long fought for enforcement of Sunday blue laws—today advocated a return to "the old-time saloon where a man was free to stand at the bar and cuss without finding a woman alongside him."

The saloon was never open on Sundays, she declared, and it would be better than having "so many places in each block." Mrs. Hession has forced the arrest of storekeepers who sold her groceries or shoestrings in violation of old Sunday blue laws.

Thomas Renamed Head Of CIO Auto Workers

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 6.—(P)—Roland J. Thomas, of Detroit, president of the Congress for Industrial Organization United Automobile Workers of America, and Secretary-Treasurer George F. Addes, of Toledo, were re-elected by acclamation today by delegates to the union's convention.

Miss Adele Kline Will Be Honored

Miss Adele Kline, whose marriage to Harry Lewis Cranman will be an important event of August 18, will be honored at a series of social affairs. Miss Frances Sinkoe entertains on Friday at a luncheon at the Henry Grady hotel. The tables will be attractively decorated with multi-colored garden flowers and favors will be given the guests.

A trousseau tea will be given by the bride-elect's mother, Mrs. J. M. Kline, at their home in Druid Hills on August 14. A number of out-of-town guests will be present.

On August 17 the ladies in the bridal party and visiting guests will be entertained at the Georgian Terrace hotel by Miss Leona Cranman, of Savannah, sister of the groom-elect.

A stag party given in honor of the groom-elect, will be held at the Ansley hotel August 17. Howard Haire, Mackey Kline and Moise Kaplan will be the hosts.

Sunday morning, August 18, after the rehearsal, Mr. and Mrs. J. Labow, of Miami, entertain the bridal party at breakfast at the Mayfair Club.

table in the dining room was centered with a large birthday cake adorned with pink and blue roses.

Mrs. Mercer York assisted the hosts in entertaining the guests.

Roosevelt Leading Willkie Among New Crop of Voters

Nine Million Old Enough To Vote in Their First Presidential Election, Gallup Points Out in Summary of Survey.

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP, Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

PRINCETON, N. J., Aug. 6.—A majority of the nation's young people who will be old enough to cast their first presidential vote in November prefer Franklin D. Roosevelt to Wendell Willkie, according to the results of a national poll just completed by the American Institute of Public Opinion. But this year's crop of new voters is far less pro-Roosevelt than the crop which cast its first vote in the presidential election four years ago.

The Gallup Poll

The political importance of the young new voters is evidenced by the fact that more than 9,000,000 people have come of voting age since the last presidential election.

When the young new voters were asked in the survey: "If the presidential election were held today, would you vote for Willkie or for Roosevelt?" the results were as follows:

Sentiment of young persons eligible to cast their first presidential vote in 1940:

For Roosevelt 54%

For Willkie 46%

A comparison of this vote with the sentiments of the crop which cast its first vote in 1936 shows a striking difference. The new voters in that year were more than two to one for Roosevelt.

Sentiment of young persons who were eligible to cast their first presidential vote in 1936:

For Roosevelt 68%

For Landon 32%

One especially interesting sidelight is that this same 1936 crop of new voters, who will be taking part in their second presidential election this November, are far less pro-Roosevelt today than they were four years ago. Only 53 per cent say they are going to vote for Roosevelt this time, as against 68 per cent who favored Roosevelt in 1936.

The President still has a strong advantage, the poll finds, with the young people in the lower income groups. If the new crop of young voters is divided into three income categories—upper, middle and lower—the upper and middle are evenly divided between Willkie and Roosevelt, while the lower group is for Roosevelt about 6 to 4.

Persons eligible to vote for President for first time this year:

Upper and Middle Income Groups 50%

Lower Income Group 63%

For Roosevelt 50%

For Willkie 50%

For Roosevelt 63%

For Willkie 37%

THE MORAL STORM

Emil Does Not Think Freya Should Give Her Child to the Breitners

By PHYLIS BOTTOME

SYNOPSIS.
At the vast Maber estate, where Freya Roth is recuperating from an illness following the death of her Communist lover, Hans Breitner, Freya suddenly discovers that she is about to bear Hans' child. Previously she has been about grimly silent, even contemplating suicide—and all the while unaware that Hans was killed by Fritz Maber, her aristocratic admirer, at the order of her own stepbrother, Olaf von Rohm. She thinks that Olaf and Fritz tried to help her, and she anticipates the wedding soon to take place between Olaf and Sophie Maber, childhood sweetheart. The will to live once more restored in her, Freya studies her medical books avidly, is supremely happy because of the child to come. She looks forward, too, to the visit of her father, Dr. Johann Roth, celebrated Jewish scientist, and does not realize that all the delays of his visit have been occasioned by the fact that even the Maber, old friends of the Roths, are afraid to invite even a renowned Jew to their home. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

INSTALLMENT LX.

"There isn't any use being angry," Emil replied sulkily. "One got to go through with it. Father'd have been left alone all right if he'd been able not to help his friends. I explained it all to both mother and father, over and over again—they can't have any private lives! That's all there is to it! As long as they would obey the new orders—and live in the spirit of the new orders—no one would interfere with them. It's the question of mother's leaving father could have been managed if they'd listened to me. It sounds rather bloody, but lots of middle-aged couples rather like leaving each other. All mother had to do was to agree in theory—get leave of absence for a few months, so that she could go abroad and look natural—and then come home without drawing too much attention to it. If anybody started the question again, she could plead they hadn't the means to live under different roofs or that she was ill and father had to look after her. In a few months things have become a good deal less rigorous. It is a bloodless revolution—that is to say that if people accept it with absolute obedience they are not killed! It seems to me perfectly fair and far more humane than any other revolution has ever been. Only people who will ram their heads against stone walls, have to get broken up! All father had to remember was not to see any suspect person, and not to act in any suspect manner."

"They took him last night to Obermansdorf, but they've been awfully decent about it. They gave him a doctor's certificate to shorten his day's work—they may even use him as a doctor part of the time—and they let me see the commandant. He wasn't too bad a fellow—though they have to choose them for being harsh—of course! Anyway, he agreed to let one of us visit him every fortnight, after the first month."

"I don't believe they can help killing him!" Freya said between dry, shaking lips, clenching her hands in her lap.

Emil made no answer; he drove fast; his eyes fixed intently on the white dusty road.

"You're to see him first," he said at last, "before mother even. You see, he guessed what I gathered from you up there—about your going to have a child!"

"Father—guessed?" Freya asked, with a little gasp. "Why, I was hardly sure myself then—I meant to tell him I thought I was—but I didn't want to worry him!"

"Well—he knew all right," Emil muttered. "He told us all—except Olaf—he wouldn't let me tell Olaf. He said Olaf hadn't behaved like a member of the family in shooting Hans, and therefore he had no right to be told family news! He told the rest of us—the way you'd like—so that we could feel well proud of you—you know, and all that! He said only a pure and generous girl would have had the courage to make a gift of her love to a threatened love—who might not live to protect her—and that any child born of such love and courage was a gift to the whole world! He told us we must all help you over it and stand by the child as if it were one of our own."

Emil gulped, and two large tears dropped on the hand he steered with.

Freya could not cry, her heart and eyes felt as dry as dust. She had a feeling as if she were being chased, and as if all that was kind and beautiful in the living world was being squeezed out of it. At last, after a long silence, she forced herself to speak.

"I'm glad he told you," she said mechanically. "I'm glad you all know, and don't mind too much! The Breitners don't mind either—they're pleased Hans had it—and they'll take the child. It had better be brought up there on the Wetterstein. What about my work at the hospital—can that go on?"

"Father thinks they'll let you go on working there, if you're careful and don't turn Communist!" Emil told her with relief. "You see, although the Nazis usually control it, and have put well-affected doctors in all the highest positions—still father never made any enemies, and a lot of people have spoken for you—quite well-thought-of people—so that you stand quite a chance!"

"You can wear a wedding ring, and call yourself 'Frau Breitner.' No one will question it—and it's a good German name. The idea is that you can go on working till December, and then have two months' leave for the birth of the child."

"I'll have to be brought up a Nazi, of course—but that it would have to be in any case—no German child will ever be anything else now—Gott sei Dank!"

"Let me drive for a bit," Freya said suddenly. "I've finished tearing up my flowers—if I sit still much longer doing nothing—I shall go mad!"

too," she said, "and yet you don't see what you or your Nazis are aiming at—or where you will come out. You want anything and everything that isn't human. What you object to in Father isn't really his disobedience—it's his kindness! And what you object to in women isn't their weakness—it's their strength! Break down the strength in us, and you'll have—and deserve to have—weak-winded babies. Are great men's mothers weak domestic women? I think not. Napoleon has strong mothers! And you, Emil—who are at heart kind and have never been a weakling—what are you going to do with your kindness, and your strength. Serve the state by obedience?" So you tell me! And when it comes to slaughtering us because we don't agree with it? Will you still 'Serve the State'—or will you try to save us—as you have tried to save Father—and as you are now trying to save me?"

At last he said: "How can anyone tell what they'll do—before it happens—unless they're like Olaf? He could, because he's got it all mapped out, and cut off from the rest of himself! His blood doesn't run through everything he's thinking! But some of us think with our hearts as well as with our heads—we can't cut ourselves up! Freya, don't make any mistake about it. I'd die for Hitler or Rohm. Perhaps one day I'll get the chance! Remember, if I do—that I die gladly! But if I'm ordered to kill someone I love—then might not be able to do it! I hope they won't ever order me to do that! If I thought the person I loved was really doing our country a grave wrong, I would try to steel myself to shoot him! But I'd have to be sure!"

Freya glowered at him, rocking the car with speed. She had a longing as savage as thirst—to wreck it—with them both in it. She wanted to rush out of the world that was hunting her—as Fritz von Maber had hunted the fleet-footed chamois across the snows and got them in the end—as he had got Hans—they were never fleet enough to escape the flight of his bullet.

Her heart was so hot with anger—so fierce with impotent desire—that to go on living and to let Emil who opposed these desires go on living, too, was positive torture.

She wanted to end—once and for all—the stinging sense of defeat that possessed her heart and mind.

Suddenly she felt Emil's hand close down over her on the steering wheel, with an iron grip. The engine slowed, and the car swung itself to a standstill. Freya turned in a flash and dragging her hands away from his, struck Emil across the face.

She struck with all her force, and then felt all the strength go out of her. She heard him say her name in a surprised, not angry, voice: "Freya!" All the years through which they had fought each other—cried and made it up—and fought again—swept over her. She found herself in his arms—her head against his breast—sobbing as if her heart were still alive.

Emil pushed her away at last, taking out his big colored handkerchief and tenderly wiping her face clear of his tears. "What you want, my girl, is food!" he told her briskly. "When did you eat last?"

Last night was it? "I thought as much! Well—we'll stop here, and stoke the engine!"

When they reached Munich, everything looked incredibly the same. Her mother greeted Freya with rather more than her usual tenderness, and Johanna and Kathi (looking shame-faced, for she'd been taken back and only Johanna had told her what she thought of her) had made the house look as sparkling with cleanliness as usual.

Rudi flung himself into Freya's arms, and for a moment she felt his slim young body trembling, as if too great a weight rested upon his childish heart. His eyes—fastening themselves upon her—burned with such an anguish of pity and tenderness that his pain hurt Freya more than her own pain had ever hurt her.

"It's all right, Freya," he whispered, "you know! It's all right—a concentration camp isn't quite a prison! And Emil says he can get him out soon! And—we're all awfully glad you've got that baby from Hans!"

Freya was on her way to see her father, but she could not fix her mind upon his image, or sort out from the thronging thoughts that welled up within her, what she most wanted to say to him in her short hour together.

The faces of the people sitting opposite her in the tram, kept distracting her attention, she felt uncomfortably aware of her changed figure and irritated by her extra weight, upon the narrow wooden seat.

The concentration camp was not in Obermansdorf, beyond it, in an empty field. Freya came at last upon a row of huts, and knew by the sentries, and the high barbed-wire fence, that she had reached her destination.

She was kept waiting at the gates for a long time. The guards stared at her coarsely with suspicious hostile eyes, while the order Emil had given her was being investigated. When at last they were told to admit her, they unlocked the gates with an unwilling air, and barked orders at her, as if she were deaf.

She walked, with a Brown Shirt on each side of her, through a big open space of dried-up earth to an isolated hut, standing at some distance from the others.

Freya's guards ushered her into a bare white-washed room, with dirty curtainless windows, covered with torpid flies.

There was even a bench to sit on; as well as the almost life-sized head of Hitler upon the wall.

When they had left Freya alone, except for an armed sentry, a few paces away from the door, the spirit of fear invaded her altogether.

It seemed to be staring at her through the curtainless windows, and to hang from the barbed-wire fence, like an invisible body.

The door opened suddenly, and shut again with a sharp click. A shadow had stepped across the threshold between these two sounds. Freya knew that it was her father.

He wore the same ill-fitting shabby garments as the other prisoners, and he was thin as a spectre, but he had not changed. His eyes shone at her with their old clear delight, and when his arms closed around her she felt safe.

Later she noticed other differences beside his thinness, his eyes had retreated more deeply into their sockets; his beautiful healing hands were scarred and roughened by heavy skill-less tasks; his back was bowed, but—something she had not dared to hope could still be there, was present in his face. His spirit was free and without fear.

Freya took both her father's hands in hers and looked at him accusingly. She found it quite easy now to remember what she most wanted to say to him.

"Olaf killed Hans!" she said. "Why did you not tell me this? I touched—by mistake—in kindness, the hand of his murderer! Fritz, too—would you have let me marry the man who actually shot him down?"

Her father shook his head solemnly, but his eyes twinkled. "I had a hunch," as the Americans say, that you would not marry Fritz," he explained gently, "and after all, you would have mentioned any such intention to your mother or to me before you carried it out! We had plenty of time! The truth is always necessary, but it is not obliged to catch any particular train—right? Besides, had you come to love Fritz, you might well have overlooked his clumsy obedience—for as you know, a spirit must be more naturally agile than that poor boy's—to escape the danger of authority!"

"Have you excuses for Olaf, too?" Freya demanded bitterly. "Was it the act of a hero—to order the shooting of an unarmed man?"

"Your brother Olaf and I," her father told her, "have always understood each other very well, and I have a great respect for him, although I think he has made some big mistakes. I can understand even the rough action that has brought us all such cruel pain. Olaf thought that he was saving you as well as his country from a dangerous enemy! This dragon of Siegfried's has much to be responsible for!"

"It was a mythical monster that your brother shot at—not that fine good young Hans, who was no man's enemy."

"Yes is a by-product of love! It is for love, that we must work, and live!"

A cartoon panel showing a woman in a dress running towards a man in a suit and hat who is being pushed back by a man in a shirt and tie. The man in the suit is shouting "EEEEOOW!". The man in the shirt and tie is pushing the man in the suit back. The woman is running towards the man in the suit. The man in the suit is looking back at the woman. The man in the shirt and tie is looking forward. The background shows a building with a doorway.

THOUGH WEAK FROM HUNGER, TOMMY CLIMBED A TREE ABOVE THE GAME TRAIL. SOON A SMALL BUCK AMBLLED 'INTO VIEW.

AS IT PASSED BENEATH HIM, HE DROPPED DOWN ON ITS BACK, HIS KNIFE READY TO STRIKE.

A MOMENT LATER, TOMMY LAY IN THE TRAIL WATCHING HIS DINNER GALLOP AWAY.

GIRLS! SUSIE DOAKS IS MOVING INTO HER BRAND-NEW HOME THIS WEEK AND I THINK THE OFFICE FORCE SHOULD DO SOMETHING ABOUT IT.

HOW ABOUT GIVING HER A TIN SHOWER? SHE SORT OF HINTED SHE'D LIKE HER KITCHEN FURNISHED.

AND ALL THE BOYS WILL CHIP IN 50 CENTS OR A DOLLAR, TEE-HEE.

THEM BIDDIES ARE AT IT AGAIN. THEY CAN FIGURE OUT MORE WAYS TO MILK US FOR DOUGH THAN THERE'S WHISKERS IN RUSSIA.

SUSIE HAS A HUSBAND IN THE DOUGH, A JOB AND A BRAND-NEW HOME. I'M LUCKY IF I EAT, AND I'M SUPPOSED TO COUGH UP A BUCK.

THERE'S MORE SHOWERS AROUND HERE THAN THERE WAS DURING THE 40-DAY FLOOD.

GETTING READY TO LOWER THE BOOM ON THE BOYS AGAIN. THEY'LL DO IT EVERY TIME —

What today means to you if you were born between:

March 21st and April 19th (ARIES)—The entire day and through 10:42 p. m. may be considered a negative day, when it will be more favorable to continue with affairs already under way, and not inaugurate new conditions or undertake changes.

April 20th and May 20th (TAURUS)—The early morning hours and until 10:24 a. m. are not conducive toward peaceful dealings in domestic affairs or undertaking heavy responsibilities. The remainder of the day and evening is excellent for association in family, business or professional activities.

May 21st and June 20th (GEMINI)—Before 11:13 a. m. put your best foot forward, for you are likely to meet success, either in a way you did not expect or from some sudden source. After 11:13 a. m. do not expect favor seeking favors from others, and you may feel that your work is sordid or tiresome. You will attain a happier feeling if you plan to co-operate with those around you.

June 21st and July 22nd (CANCER)—After 3:36 p. m. is the better part of the day when you will feel that you are surrounded by affairs that are of a constructive nature. Before 3:36 p. m. dealings of a private nature, deals relating to the opposite sex, many encounter stubbornness.

July 23rd and August 22nd (LEO)—The entire day and evening favors new beginners and new contacts should prove constructive and permanent.

August 23rd and September 22nd (VIRGO)—Almost all interests are favored today. Appointments, meetings, conferences, domestic affairs, public matters should result in much harmony, and when evening comes you should have a feeling that your work has been well done.

September 23rd and October 22nd (LIBRA)—Before 11:03 a. m. favors attention to ordinary affairs. The remainder of the day and evening does not especially favor seeking favors of others, or the beginning of new enterprises. A good day to stick to routine.

October 23rd and November 21st (SCORPIO)—An excellent day for general business and affairs of correspondence. The evening hours favor new plans and social activities.

November 22nd and December 21st (SAGGITARIUS)—Previous to 2:41 p. m. guard your health, as the influences operating now often bring a feeling of lassitude. Use care in dealing with liquids or around watering places. The evening hours suggest caution in traveling and avoid sudden changes.

December 22nd and January 19th (CAPRICORN)—The entire day is filled with influences that produce idealism and little regard for pure facts, therefore new beginnings, encounters and daily occurrences may have meanings that are below the surface. An excellent day to stick to routine matters.

January 20th and February 18th (AQUARIUS)—The entire day and evening is one of optimism and is all embracing for good; that is, put your best foot forward, seek favors and begin those things that are your greatest desires.

February 19th and March 20th (PISCES)—Before 9:06 a. m. favors ideas that are new and original, but the entire day does not especially favor new changes and new beginnings. An optimistic tendency is toward recklessness, extravagances and a disregard for the feelings of others. Give your time before putting into action the things you desire and don't be too hasty to take offense.

DR. CHRISTIAN—Jean Hersholt, in the "Dr. Christian" title role, will star in a comedy called "Recount," during the broadcast of that program to be heard over WGST at 7:30 o'clock tonight.

During the uproar started by the town clerk of River's End, Dr. Christian will rectify a census report. Rosemary DeCamp, as Judy Price, will help the kindly doctor.

SMILES—There'll be a hot time in the old town when Bud Abbott and Lou Costello join the Wackys on the Wackey Department during the "Hour of Smiles" broadcast to be heard over WSB at 8 o'clock tonight. Bud gave his partner, Lou, a political "hot foot" to get himself elected fire chief, using the slogan: "Elect the fireman to save your child—if she's female, and if she's not one!" Abbott hopes, to the chagrin of Costello's fiery temper in time to introduce their "Wack of the Week," a criminologist, Nelson Tracy, who protested his appearance with the boys, as he's on his vacation. Banay Venuta, Harry von Zell, and the Wackys' own Sweden's orchestra complete the cast for the "Hour of Smiles."

The program includes: "I'll Never Smile Again," "Lullaby of Broadway."

DRAMA—"Second String," a rollicking comedy about Broadway, newspapers, theater and love, and starring two of radio's most popular comedians, Marion Shockley and Helene Dumas, will be broadcast as the third "Manhattan at Midnight" drama over WSB at 7.30 o'clock tonight.

Miss Shockley will be right at home in her role, that of Carol Carrol, a Broadway school girl who, she finally, attains her ambition to appear in a Broadway play, only to receive a severe topographical spanking at the hands of the critics. The supporting cast of leading radio performers will include Lawson Zerbe as Frank Brown, Gene Dineen as Marcia Williams, and John Brown as Sam Borden.

CLASS—The old professor, Kay Kyser, will call or order another session of the weekly "College of Musical Knowledge" program over WSB at 9 o'clock tonight when he'll select a group of promising young pupils from the student body to catch the questions he fires, and to return them to him with the correct answers, if possi-

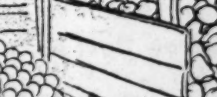

The program includes:

- "The Woodpecker Song."
- "Playmates."
- "Fools Rush In."
- "Can't Resist You."
- "The Nearest of You."
- "Tim Noble's Baby."
